

SAVINGS TRUST CO. AND TWO BANKS IN ST. LOUIS COUNTY SHUT THEIR DOORS

Depositories at 4915 Delmar Blvd., 6633 Delmar and 6386 Clayton Road Put in Hands of State Examiners.

SIX IN 8 DAYS; ALL HAD R. F. C. LOANS

These Total $1,098,726—Savings Trust Directors Say Run Forced Suspension but Effort to Reorganize Will Be Made.

The Savings Trust Co., 4915 Delmar boulevard, shut its doors at 1 o'clock this afternoon to stop heavy withdrawals by depositors. This action followed closely upon the closing of the University City Bank & Trust Co., 6633 Delmar boulevard, and the Park Savings Trust Co., 6386 Clayton road, in Richmond Heights.

The directors of the Savings Trust Co., of which John J. Dowling is president, issued this statement at 2:30 p. m.:

"The board of directors has deemed it advisable to temporarily suspend operation of the Savings Trust Co., in order to protect its depositors. A run on the bank, caused by closing of several adjacent banks, caused heavy withdrawals. Plans for reorganization are under consideration, and at this time the affairs of the bank are in charge of Deputy State Finance Commissioner Roy D. Miller."

The bank's officers said the bank would not be open tomorrow, and that its future would depend on the success of the efforts at reorganization.

The University City and the Richmond Heights banks were closed today by their directors, following heavy withdrawals. Notices posted on their doors stated that they were in the hands of the State Finance Commissioner. All three banks are members of the Federal Reserve system, but do not belong to the St. Louis clearing house.

The University City bank opened its usual time, 8 a. m., but closed its doors shortly afterward, and at 9:05 its notice of closing was posted. The Park Savings Trust closing was announced last evening to the State Finance Department and the St. Louis Clearing House.

Including these three, six of the smaller banks in the St. Louis district have closed within eight days. The Hodiarnont Bank, 616 E. 24th street, failed to open last Thursday; the Hamilton State Bank, 5852 Delmar boulevard, was closed Saturday; and the Overland State Bank, 2335 Woodson road, was closed yesterday.

The Hodiarnont, Hamilton and Overland banks were not affiliated with the Federal Reserve or the Clearing House Association.

All Borrowers From R. F. C. All of the six banks were borrowers from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which had advanced them a total of $1,098,726. Except in the case of the Park Savings Trust Co., the R. F. C. loans constituted the greater part of the total bills payable listed in the banks' statements of Dec. 10. The statements showed:

Hamilton State Bank, $126,556.30; Hodiarnont Bank, $126,556.30; Park Savings Trust Co., $126,556.30; Savings Trust Co., $126,556.30; University City Bank, $126,556.30; and the R. F. C. Park Savings Trust Co., $126,556.30.

The ceremony was performed at the home of William Woodburn, Reno attorney. Only a few friends were present.

District Judge Clark J. Guid, who earlier in the day granted Wichfeld a divorce from the former Mabelle Swift, officiated. Miss Widener wore a dress of red crepe, a black hat and black accessories. Wichfeld was dressed in a business suit.

Mr. and Mrs. Wichfeld said they planned to leave for Southern California on an indefinite stay in Beverly Hills.

The marriage was the third for Miss Widener. Her first marriage, to Carter Randolph Ledy, with whom she eloped when she was 17, ended in divorce, as did her second marriage, to Milton W. Holden of Philadelphia.

Irving Trust Co. Named in New York on Voluntary Petition in Bankruptcy.

VETO IS THOUGHT TO AWAIT FARM RELIEF MEASURE

Hoover Said to Have Decided to Reject the Allotment Plan if It Reaches Him.

VOTES INDICATE HOUSE WILL PASS IT

Bill Being Rushed Through Amendment Stage, With Final Ballot Likely Today.

By CHARLES G. ROSS, Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch. WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Word comes from the White House, through persons who have talked with the President about the pending farm relief bill, that he has made up his mind to veto the measure if it reaches him.

President Hoover is said to feel that the bill, which has the approval, at least in principle, of the incoming President, represents an unwholesome effort to "regiment" the farmers, is a price-fixing device of dangerous possibilities, and, moreover, of doubtful constitutionality.

The President is committed to the voluntary co-operative principle which is the essence of the act creating the Federal Farm Board. All his campaign speeches on the farm problem decried efforts to "compound a patent medicine" especially for farmers.

Meantime, the whipping into shape (or out of shape) of the so-called domestic allotment plan on the floor of the House continues, and leaders in the fight for the bill expect its passage late today or tomorrow.

The House today adopted an amendment which establishes an initial marketing period for the benefit of crops and fixes the period the following minimum prices which the bill seeks to guarantee the farmer: 75 cents a bushel on wheat and rice, 9 cents a pound on cotton, 5 cents a pound on corn, 3 cents a pound on peanuts, 25 cents a pound on butterfat.

This initial marketing period would precede the 1933-34 marketing year, to be defined by the Secretary of Agriculture. The bill would not become effective on tobacco until after the beginning of the 1933-34 year.

Other Amendment Votes. The House defeated, 115 to 101, an effort to strike from the bill a provision to levy the same processing tax on silk and rayon as applied to cotton.

A proposal to reduce the initial value on hogs to 4 cents a pound and the 1933-34 marketing year value to 5 cents was rejected, 61 to 47.

McGugin (Rep.), Kansas, once again was defeated in an effort to strike hogs from the bill.

The House adopted an amendment to change the base period on which the pre-war parity price of tobacco should be figured from 1908-1914 to the 10-year period 1909-1919.

A committee amendment was approved, fixing the adjustment charge for hogs on a graduated basis, beginning at 3 1/2 cents a pound for the period ending April 30, 1933, and running to 4 1/2 cents for the period ending with the beginning of the 1933-34 marketing year.

'TREAT HIM ROUGH,' FRIEND OF SHAW ADVISES AMERICANS

'Let Him Enjoy Himself by Saying He Alone Is Sane in World of Lunatics.'

By the Associated Press. SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 12.—A former friend of George Bernard Shaw when he arrives in the United States for the first time, next month, was suggested here yesterday by Maurice Colbourne, English actor and friend of the Irish playwright, in an address before the English-Speaking Union.

"Treat him rough," said Colbourne. "Give him something to curse about. Treat him like a renegade. Keep him outside the 10-mile limit so he can enjoy himself by saying he alone is sane in a world of American lunatics. He'll love that."

Colbourne is appearing here in Shaw's new play.

BANK ROBBER GETS $35,000 COMPANION SHOT, CAPTURED

Customer Grabs Pistol, Fires on One Thief in Cleveland Suburb Holdup.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 12.—Two young gunmen held up and robbed the cashier of a bank here today. A passing citizen shot and captured one of the criminals.

Former Berea Councilman Clarence Fox, 35, was the robber. He was accompanied by a companion, who was shot and captured. The robbers were armed with pistols and a sawed-off shotgun.

The blow knocked the criminal's pistol and Fox caught up the weapon. He fired five times and the robber fell, seriously wounded.

The other robber, who was carrying a sawed-off shotgun, fled. He was pursued by the crowd and captured. He was armed with a pistol and a sawed-off shotgun.

W. H. Ames, president of the bank, said the robbers entered shortly after the bank was opened for business. He and five other employees were forced into the basement, where they were bound. Mr. Ames also came in and was forced to join the rest. The robbers went upstairs and cleaned out the vault. Ames and the employees were freed by an ice man.

LEMP AND PRIEST SLATED WITH IGGE FOR POLICE BOARD

Former Congressman Not Likely to Refuse Presidency of Body Over Gov. Park's Insistence.

POLITICIANS TALK OF SHAKE-UP IN CHIEFS

Patrick Kirk Under Discussion for Police Chief and Elias Hoagland for Detective Chief.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch. JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 12.—The personnel of the new St. Louis Board of Police Commissioners is expected to be announced by Gov. Park the last part of next week, shortly after his visit to St. Louis Tuesday to speak at the Real Estate Exchange. Unless there is a change in present plans, William L. Igge will be the president of the board.

The Governor said today that he had not decided on the other members, and that Igge, though he had had the question of acceptance of the appointment under consideration for several weeks, had neither accepted nor rejected it.

The report here, coming from a well informed source, is that two of the remaining three members will be Charles A. Lemp and George T. Priest. Information from the same source is that the fourth place has been offered to and declined by John J. Nangle, Maroon C. Early and Ralph Coale.

Speculating on Shakeup. Democratic politicians are speculating on the possibility of a Police Department shakeup when Democrats take control of the Police Board. If Chief of Police Gerk and Chief of Detectives Kaiser are reduced in rank, Democrats look for the promotion of Capt. Patrick Kirk of the Southern District to be Police Chief and Capt. Elias W. Hoagland of the North District to be Chief of Detectives, a post he formerly held.

A number of prominent St. Louisans, including August A. Busch, are taking the initiative in trying to prevail on Gov. Park to select Chief Gerk in command. The president of the Police Board, Oliver T. Remmers, is submitting his resignation recently, wrote Gov. Park that the Police Department under Chief Gerk is "the most efficient in the United States... clicking as never before, with the men on their toes, anxious to serve their community, recognizing that politics or other influences have no weight in appointments, promotions or dismissals."

Gerk has been chief for eight years. He will have completed 34 years' service next August. On Sept. 26, 1934, when he will be 60 years old, he will be eligible for retirement on pension. If he is retained as chief until that time his salary, retirement pay would be half of his $6500 salary. If he is not retained his retirement pay would be less.

Igge Non-Committal. Igge, when questioned as to acceptance of the presidency of the board, was non-committal, but in his conversation on the subject had rather the attitude of being disinclined to accept, but not likely to refuse over the Governor's insistence.

Two versions are heard from Democrats of prominence who might be in position to have information about the appointments. One is that Igge is merely holding off acceptance until he is certain that the other members to be appointed will be men on whom he can count for complete co-operation. The other is that he does not really care for the post and is permitting his name to be used until the Governor can decide upon a man for president.

Those expressing the former opinion say that Priest and Lemp will be satisfactory to Igge, and that he is urging James A. Waschter, a lawyer, for the fourth place. They further intimate that the Governor has not been enthusiastic about Waschter, not that he doubts that Waschter would perform acceptable service, but because he is fearful that a board made up only of men who have been active in Democratic politics in St. Louis might be construed by the public as support to political influences.

Coupled with this is the report that the Governor earnestly hopes to induce somebody widely known and prominent in business to take the fourth place.

The Governor said that he would not announce the board until after his visit to St. Louis, as he had told several persons that he would discuss the subject with them and that would be his first opportunity to do so.

ST. LOUIS CASKET PAYMASTER LOSES $4100 IN HOLDUP

Robbed by Man in Front of Company Office of Cash Just Withdrawn From Bank.

The paymaster of the St. Louis Casket Co. was held up in front of the company office at 1821 Chouteau avenue at 1:30 p. m. today by a man who took from him $4100 in cash, withdrawn from the bank a few minutes before to meet a payroll.

Eugene I. Dale, 5014 Wabasha avenue, the paymaster, was accompanied by Richard Turner of 1728 Iowa avenue, a chauffeur, who had taken him to the First National Bank to get the money. The hold-up man ran west and got into an automobile parked a block west of the casket company. Neither Dale nor Turner was able to say what the hold-up man looked like or whether a second man awaited him in the car.

"We had just drawn up to the curb in the car when a man ran up to the machine," Dale told a Post-Dispatch reporter. "This is a stickup," he said as he pointed a revolver into the car. The money was on the floor between Turner and me. It was in a leather satchel which was wrapped in paper.

"The holdup man reached in, took out the satchel, turned and ran west in Chouteau. About half a block west he got into an automobile. We ran toward it to get the license number, but the plate was smeared with mud and could not be read."

Dale was held up in front of the office last Jan. 29 and forced to drive into an alley where a holdup man took from him a payroll of the same amount. In both cases the loss was covered by insurance. Dale and Turner described the man in today's robbery as about 25 years old, five feet 10 inches tall and weighing about 150 pounds. He wore a brown overcoat, cap and blue work shirt.

BOND INVESTORS WERE NOT TOLD OF EXCHANGE IN COLLATERAL

Dr. Max Winkler Criticizes Lee, Higginson & Co.—Senators Ask Him How He Would Stop Swindles Like Kreuger's.

COUZENS SUGGESTS JAIL IS THE REMEDY

Expresses Mock Amazement That Britain Would Send a Lord Kysant to Prison for Offense Not Punishable in U. S.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT, A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Prison sentences for bankers and accountants who permit such swindles as the Ivar Kreuger enterprises, were suggested today by Senator Couzens (Rep.), Michigan, at the resumption of the Senate Banking Committee's investigation of the Kreuger & Toll debacle.

Couzens, probably the richest man in the Senate, was trying to learn how Congress could protect investors by new legislation. The witness before the committee was Dr. Max Winkler, associate professor of economics at the College of the City of New York and president of the American Council of Foreign Bond Holders.

Dr. Winkler testified that valuable pledged collateral secured the $50,000,000 "secured sinking fund gold debenture" of Kreuger & Toll had been replaced by inferior securities. The substitution, he said, was known to the trustees of the debentures, the Lee, Higginson Trust Co., but was not reported to the issuing bankers, Lee, Higginson & Co., or to the New York Stock Exchange.

Winkler continued, had no means of knowing that the value of the collateral back of their debentures had been greatly lessened.

These debentures, which sold as high as 104, are now quoted on the New York Stock Exchange around 14.

Duty of Lee, Higginson. "Do you believe," asked the Couzens, "that Lee, Higginson did their full duty to their clients in this transaction?"

"Personally, I do not think so," Winkler replied. "It seems to me that where such substitutions are permitted, it is the duty of the bankers to inform their investors that securities that are intrinsically sound have been replaced by inferior securities. Lee, Higginson had floated bonds for many years. I doubt whether they would have sold directly to their clients these substituted securities. It was their duty to see that their investors were protected."

Senator Fletcher (Dem.) Florida, pointed out that testimony yesterday disclosed that Lee, Higginson Trust Co. had been advised of the substitutions but had not passed the information.

"Lee, Higginson & Co., should have made it their business to inform themselves about any substitutions, no matter how inconsequential," Winkler observed.

Couzens suggested jail. "Didn't Lee, Higginson leave their clients to believe," asked Couzens, "that they were to be protected when the bankers put Donald Duran on the board of directors of Kreuger & Toll?" "I can't answer that," Winkler said.

LEAGUE BACKERS OPEN THREE-DAY CONVENTION HERE

Direct Political Action to Put U. S. in World Organization Is Advocated by Speakers.

MILLION PLEDGES BY VOTERS SOUGHT

Movement Under Way to Persuade Citizens to Consider Candidates' International Views.

Direct political action to bring about entrance of the United States into the League of Nations was advocated at opening sessions of the League of Nations Association today at Hotel Jefferson. About 300 persons attended.

The association's original program of "education" has been supplemented by formation of an organization in each of the congressional districts of the United States, centering in a chairman, or, in districts where partisanship is acute, a bipartisan committee.

The functions of the district groups are to "educate" candidates, obtain their views and inform the public. The association is campaigning for 1,000,000 signatures for pledge cards promising consideration, in voting for Senators or Congressmen, of their international as well as local views.

Says Sentiment Is Strong.

"Sentiment for world co-operation is stronger here than in any country in the world, with the possible exception of Great Britain, and yet we can't even get into the World Court," Clark M. Eichelberger, executive secretary of the Midwest area of 13 states, told the delegates.

"All this educational campaign, all these conferences and round tables are futile unless we are heard in Congress. The time for talk and back-slapping has passed. In no country in the world are so many meetings held, but they have no use unless they have some effect at Washington."

Eichelberger, who spoke at the opening of a noon meeting where representatives of 15 organizations most of them national and all friendly to international co-operation of some sort, suggested united action. Those who are in the line, he remarked, might find it difficult while to sacrifice some individuality for united strength and effect.

"The American people are more interested in international co-operation and the League of Nations than at any time since the rejection of the Versailles treaty," he declared. "And this is not due to an increase of idealism, but to the stern lesson of self-interest."

The Far Eastern Crisis.

"They have come to see that their self-interest is involved in the present international situation, and as a result our Government is co-operating in practically all activities of the League of Nations. We co-operate, but always late. We co-operate after the Far Eastern crisis arises, but if we had belonged to the League in the beginning, Japan would not have invaded Manchuria."

The Missouri organization will be considerably enlarged at the close of the convention Saturday, announced Eichelberger, who detailed activities of this area. He said the Missouri organization, devoted to annual reports. He said the Chicago headquarters sent speakers to 1500 meetings in the 13 states last year and in the Far Eastern crisis mailed out 2500 letters in answer to questions and in urging support of this Government's position. It led for this section the movement to boycott Japan.

That situation, he and other association leaders conceded, resulted in this country in "general disappointment" in the League's slow progress. But, they added, it had everyone rooting for the League and supplanted public indifference with a general desire for the League to succeed.

Praises Lytton Report.

"Close students," particularly, approved the League's handling of the Far Eastern problem, said Charles H. Strong, vice president, who called the Lytton report to the League on China and Japan "the finest of its kind ever written."

Strong, for 17 years secretary of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, will deliver the keynote address at tonight's buffet supper in the absence of the president, George W. Wickham.

The trend of public opinion toward League membership, he said, was demonstrated in the November elections by referendums in which 11 Massachusetts cities favored entrance of the United States by a total vote of 25,681 to 14,879. In some cities, he added, the majority was 2 to 1 for League membership, and one town, which voted against membership in 1926, had voted for it 6000 to 4500 in 1930.

Mrs. Harriet B. Laidlaw of New York, comrade of Carrie Chapman Catt in the campaign for women's suffrage, declared she had never seen an anti-League audience. She commented that "isolationism" were "more noisy than numerous."

League Advocates at Meeting Here

ABOVE, MRS. HARRIET B. LAIDLAW of New York, veteran feminist, and her daughter, LOUISE, outstanding participants in the League of Nations convention at Hotel Jefferson. Below, MRS. L. H. FRADKIN of New Jersey, who represented the Conference on the Cause and Cure of War at today's meeting.

NOTED WOMEN HERE FOR LEAGUE MEETING

Mrs. L. H. Fradkin of New Jersey Is Expert on Chemical Warfare.

Among the prominent women who are attending the tenth annual convention of the League of Nations Association at Hotel Jefferson are an expert on chemical warfare, a former militant suffragette and her daughter, a poet, a woman who helped in ending the school of nations at the Principia, and one who traveled in Russia with Lady Astor and George Bernard Shaw. They are a diversified group, but they have all come here in the interest of international relations and the League of Nations.

Mrs. L. H. Fradkin of Montclair, N. J., chairman of the League's executive board in that State, has come here primarily as a representative of the National Commission on the Cause and Cure of War. If she knows much about cause and cure, she also knows the consequences, for she has made the study of chemical warfare her particular province.

Why She Is for Peace.

"If there is a next war and it is between chemical-producing nations," she says, "civilization with its war zone will be wiped out. That's why I belong to organizations interested in international peace."

Mrs. Fradkin published a book on "Chemical Warfare: Its Possibilities and Probabilities," three years ago. It was the fruit of the work in chemistry which she did in her undergraduate days at Vassar College. Since then she has received her master's degree in psychology and economics at Columbia. She has also carried on much research, not so much chemical as historical, besides being a member of numerous women's organizations.

Mrs. Fradkin thinks that within five years the United States will be forced to enter the League of Nations whether it wants to or not. "The world economic depression will bring us into the league," she said. "For national selfish interests, the reason the league has moved so slowly is because the United States and Russia are not members. The blame for its ineffectiveness in the war zone will be wiped out on the members but on the non-members. Japan fears Russia and the public opinion of the United States. With these two nations not in the league, she fears the league less."

After all, the cause of all war is the refusal of nations to go to the conference table and settle their disputes. The curse of war, now that the Stimson doctrine forces consultation, is recourse to the conference table, either within the league or outside of it.

COMMITTEE SEEKS EARLY ACTION ON TRANSIT PROBLEM

Downtown Property Owners and Merchants Urge City Board to Give Matter 'Vigorous Attention.'

A committee representing downtown property owners and merchants today urged the City's Joint Transportation Committee to continue to give "thought and vigorous attention" to the mass transportation problem.

The Property Owners' Committee, giving its views in a letter sent to Arthur C. Meyers, secretary of the Transportation Committee, expressed regret that negotiations with the Public Service Co. security holders' committee had been terminated. The welfare of the whole city and the maintenance of property values in the central business district required that constant access to the central district be afforded not only for visitors from outside the city, but also for residents of the metropolitan area, the letter said.

The letter was signed by William T. Nardin, chairman; Daniel K. Catlin, George C. Hitchcock, G. A. Radford, Sidney Basar and W. H. Bibby. Nardin, who is president of the Missouri State Life Insurance Co., recently became active in the transit situation as a representative of the downtown property owners and merchants.

The negotiations with the Public Service Co. security holders were terminated last week by the withdrawal of the representatives of the security holders from a subcommittee which had under consideration the question of possible purchase by the city of street railway and bus facilities. The company group said it was "opposed to an agreement could not be reached."

This returned the transit problem to the Transportation Committee of which Alderman Edward H. Wiehe is chairman. This committee was created by the Board of Aldermen to work out plans to make effectively the general policy of the security holders' committee. Other members of the Transportation Committee are: Aldermen William J. Radford, George C. Hitchcock, May Miller, Comptroller Nolte and President Neun of the Board of Aldermen.

Calling attention to the "millions of dollars" spent by the State and St. Louis County in building highways bringing greater trade possibilities to St. Louis, the property owners' committee said: "It would be a sad commentary on the city itself if we neglected to take action to improve the public facilities for the transportation of goods and passengers."

HOOPER EXPECTED TO VETO PENDING FARM MEASURE

which marks the progress of any tariff bill through Congress, immediately began. Peanuts, rice and dairy products were quickly added to the list of favored commodities.

Another flood of amendments poured in yesterday, but by this time the leaders interested in saving the measure had got control. In somewhat chastened mood, the House in one vote after another knocked out proposals to broaden the scope of the proposed bounty. The commodities rejected included flaxseed, corn, blackstrap and goats.

A test on the bill itself, indicating its passage in substantially its present form, was afforded by the vote on a motion to strike out the enacting clause and thereby jettison the whole measure. This motion was defeated by 161 to 100.

The friends of the bill again prevailed against an effort by Representative Beam (Dem.), Illinois, to eliminate hogs from the list of benefited products. This amendment, which had been urged by protesting meat packers, was beaten 159 to 85.

As already explained, the price of the specified products—wheat, cotton, hogs, tobacco, peanuts, rice and dairy products as the bill stood today—would be boosted to a "parity price" in relation to general commodity prices, through a bounty to be paid to those farmers agreeing to cut their production by 20 per cent. The bounty would be paid from the proceeds of taxes collected from processors.

The bill was attacked in the House yesterday by Representative McSwain (Dem.), South Carolina, leader of the opposition, as proposing an unconstitutional use of the taxing power, since it "would take money directly out of the pocket of one citizen and put it in the pocket of another citizen."

The bill, said McSwain, would "impose the sales tax in its most vicious form." This was the general tenor of the speeches against the bill on both sides of the aisle.

Champions of the plan defended it warmly on the ground that the whole public interest would be served by an increase in the farmer's purchasing power.

One of the few successful amendments of the day was that offered by Representative Le Gall (Rep.), New York, to protect the proposed price-adjustment certificates against attachment for debts. These are the certificates by which the farmer's price for any of the benefited commodities would be brought up from the prevailing market price to the established "parity" price.

"Section 1 permits Federal and Federal Land Banks to accord just and lenient treatment to delinquent borrowers, and to provide the basis for the capitalization of new loans. New loans may be made on the basis of the present basis except that the bonds must bear on their face the statement that they are the obligations of the United States and are guaranteed by the United States."

In the Senate, Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, offered a bill to unify the Federal Land and Joint Stock Land Banks and to reorganize existing mortgages at not more than 4 1/2 per cent interest.

She received an honorary LL. D. two years ago from Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla. Her daughter is now working for her doctor's degree in philosophy at Columbia.

Among the other women who are here for the three-day sessions is Miss Gertrude Ely, president of the Pennsylvania League of Women Voters, and its national representative at this convention. Miss Ely was a canteen worker with the Army of Occupation in Germany during the war, and was abroad more recently in company with Mr. Shaw and Lady Astor.

Mrs. Hazel B. Ewing of Bloomington, Ill., one of the founders of the Principia School of Nations, designed to teach international cooperation, which will be included in that school's new plant at Elmhurst, Ill., also is a participant in the convention. Mrs. Ewing is representing the Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Frederick B. Fisher of Ann Arbor, Mich., has come as a representative of the American Association of University Women.

THINKS BANKERS FAILED CLIENTS IN KREUGER DEAL

thing" Couzens suggested, "if we could put the bankers and accountants who permit these things in jail."

Referring to Lord Kylsant, former chairman of the Royal Mail Steamship Co., who was sent to prison for his part in issuing a company prospectus, Winkler said that, if there was legislation in the United States comparable to the British companies act, the American investor would be protected.

"Do they punish lords over there?" Couzens asked in mock astonishment. "Twelve months in prison," Winkler replied simply.

Senator Barkley (Dem.) of Kentucky, pointed out that American business was conducted under a dual system of government—state and national.

"Ordinary frauds," said Barkley, "are punished by states. Is such legislation as the British companies act possible in the United States?"

"I speak as an investor, not as a constitutional authority," Winkler replied.

"We punish violations of national laws about narcotics and women," Couzens observed.

"Would it be practicable," Couzens continued, "for some Government agency to pass on prospectuses about securities before the securities are issued?"

"I think the British system is better," Winkler answered. "The persons who issue the prospectuses should be held responsible for the statements in them. If such persons know they are to be punished by law for false statements they would be more careful."

At this point Marrinan offered for the record a copy of a prospectus issued by Lee, Higginson & Co. in January, 1931, on Kreuger & Toll participating certificates.

Couzens examined this prospectus and asked Winkler if Lee, Higginson could be sued on this prospectus if there was a company's act in this country.

"Very definitely so," Winkler replied. "In the Lord Kylsant case the British court held a document to be false when it created a false impression although every separate statement in the prospectus might be true."

Senator Fletcher said that it seemed to him the State of New York or the New York Stock Exchange could have protected the American investor would have been more adequately protected against substitution of inferior collateral.

Reading from the listing regulations of the Exchange, Winkler said Kreuger & Toll had promised in applying for listing the debentures to report "promptly" when any pledged collateral was changed or moved.

"Who should have informed the Stock Exchange about the substitution of securities," Marrinan asked.

"The Kreuger & Toll Co.," was the reply.

19 REPORTED SLAIN WHEN SPANISH GUARDS BOMB HOUSE

Building at Casa Vieja Destroyed by Hand Grenades; Six of Assassins Wounded.

MADRID, Jan. 12.—Nineteen persons engaged in anti-Government activities are reported to have been killed today when civil guards and assault guards bombed a building at Casa Vieja where they had taken refuge.

The Government announced that the house was destroyed by hand grenades and that it was impossible to ascertain now whether more than 19 of the occupants were killed.

During the attack the explosives fired on the guards, wounding elsewhere in the same city the houses are reported to have been burned in the campaign against extremists.

Officials of the newspaper La Vanguardia were damaged by bomb and a news vendor was killed yesterday.

asked Fletcher. "Donald Durand, the American director."

Durand testified yesterday Fletcher observed, "and we must know to know about the company."

"He was a director for the years," Marrinan added, "and did not attend a board meeting until after Kreuger's suicide."

Impressed by "Frankness," Frank Altshuler, chairman of the Listing Committee of the New York Stock Exchange, who followed Winkler in the witness stand, told the committee that in his own opinion American investors must be protected by independent audits of companies listed on public exchanges.

Altshuler recounted how he and his associates on the New York Exchange had been impressed by Kreuger's world wide business, particularly his purchase of $75,000,000 worth of French Government securities. When allocations were made for Kreuger securities on the New York Exchange, he continued, the Listing Committee was further impressed with the frank statements Kreuger made about his company.

Winkler, in striking contrast, said, to the practice of other foreign companies except those of Great Britain.

"The experience of the Exchange with Kreuger, he continued, convinced officials that there must be more adequate protection for the investor."

"I personally would welcome legislation requiring an independent audit of all companies having securities listed on public exchange," he said. "If this is not done by legislation, public opinion will eventually force the New York Stock Exchange to take action of its own accord."

"The only way this could be done would be to strike from the list all companies which refuse to submit to an independent audit. We have been reluctant to take this step because of the losses to individual investors in companies refusing to submit to such an independent audit. But sooner or later we shall be forced to take this action for the general welfare of all investors."

896,554 SOUGHT FROM THE R. F. C. BY RELIEF COMMITTEE

With United Campaign $1,324,266 Short of Goal, Application Is Made to Washington.

TO CARE FOR JANUARY AND FEBRUARY NEEDS

Meanwhile Committee of Business Men Will Seek Additional $100,000 Gifts From 110 Firms.

With the United Relief Campaign falling short of its goal by $1,324,266, the Citizens' Committee on Relief and Employment has applied to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for $896,554 to enable it to agencies to operate through January and February.

The committee's application, approved by Gov. Park, was forwarded to Washington last night. E. G. Steger, director of the committee, said it anticipated the agencies would spend $1,040,000 in the first two months of this year and that only $150,000 would be available to them within that period from the United Relief Campaign.

Steger said the campaign probably would not be available until about March 1. A suit to test the validity of the $4,600,000 relief bond issue is set for hearing before the Supreme Court Jan. 28 and a decision is not expected until near the end of February. The bonds will not be placed on the market until then.

Reasons for Application.

While the failure of the United Relief Campaign to reach its $3,800,000 goal constitutes the application making necessary the application for R. F. C. funds, Steger said, the largest factor was the present inavailability of the relief bonds. Efforts to raise additional money in the United Relief Campaign, he emphasized, will be continued.

Most subscriptions to the United Relief Campaign are payable monthly. More than $150,000 will be paid during January and February. But only 55 per cent of the proceeds of the campaign is to go to the family relief agencies of the committee, the rest being allocated to other agencies, orphan homes and similar institutions.

Steger said the committee and its relief agencies were now caring for more than 30,000 families and it was expected that many more would be in need through January and February. Expenditures were figured at $520,000 for each month. Last month the cost of relief was $468,000.

The United Relief Campaign, with a goal of $3,800,000, has been under way since Dec. 4. So far pledges of $2,326,734, or 60 per cent of the goal, have been reported.

Committee of five business men headed by Frank C. Rand is expected to complete within a day or two its effort to obtain at least $100,000 for the campaign in additional subscriptions from 110 of the largest corporations in St. Louis.

Representatives of about 60 large corporations who attended a meeting at the First National Bank yesterday voted to "assume the responsibility" for obtaining at least that much from the corporations they represented and others who had not sent executives to the meeting.

With the United Relief Campaign falling short of its goal by $1,324,266, the Citizens' Committee on Relief and Employment has applied to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for $966,554 to enable its agencies to operate through January and February.

The United Relief Campaign, with a goal of $3,800,000, has been under way since Dec. 4. So far pledges of $2,525,734, or 66 per cent of the goal, have been reported.

A committee of five business men headed by Frank C. Rand is expected to complete within a day or two its effort to obtain at least $100,000 for the campaign in additional subscriptions from 110 of the largest corporations in St. Louis.

Representatives of about 60 large corporations who attended a meeting at the First National Bank yesterday voted to "assume that responsibility for obtaining at least that much from the corporations they represented and others who had not sent executives to the meeting."

The responsibility was delegated to the committee headed by Rand, who is chairman of the board of International Shoe Co. Other members are Morton May, president of May Department Stores Co.; Martin J. Collins, president of Graham Paper Co.; Harry B. Wallace, president of the Cupples Co.; and Albert M. Keller, partner in Paul Brown & Co.

Importance of Effort. The hoped-for $100,000 in contributions was not underwritten by any group of those present, but it was said that preliminary reports made at the meeting were such that there was every reason to believe that amount could be obtained.

Should the money be raised, there will be undertaken a general re-solicitation of other corporations and of those who have given through the larger subscriptions division of the campaign organization. Re-solicitation in that division, begun some time ago, has been held in abeyance pending a complete plan, such as that now adopted, for obtaining substantial further gifts. The plan calls also for addressing, through coupons published in newspapers, an appeal to the general public.

In any event, the greater part of the campaign organization will disband tomorrow when solicitors are to meet at Hotel Statler for their final report session.

LILY BUSCH MAGNUS TO WED A. D. B. PREECE

Her Engagement to Huntsman of Bridespur Club Announced.

The engagement of Miss Lily Busch Magnus and Arthur D. B. Preece, Huntsman for Bridespur Club in Huntley Village, was announced today at a luncheon at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Magnus, 4 Hortense place.

The wedding will be held at the Magnus home next winter, but the date has not been fixed. After a wedding trip of a month, they expect to return to live for a time with her parents.

Miss Magnus, a debutante of 1929, was the first great-grandchild of the late Adolphus Busch, who founded the brewery and other business enterprises on which the family fortune was based. She was named for her great-grandmother, the late Lily Busch.

Preece is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Preece of Northamptonshire, Long Buckby, England. His parents spent about half the year there in Murrett House, which they purchased from the Duke of Westminster, and divide the remainder of their time between their other residences at Westbury, Long Island, and Del Rey, Fla.

Most of the guests at the luncheon were friends who made their debut in 1929 as Miss Magnus. Among them was Miss Edward C. Simmons II, who as Jean Ford was Veiled Prophet Queen in that year. Others were: Miss Christine Jones, Mrs. Rolle Wells Street, Mrs. John H. Hayward, Mrs. Crawford Johnson, Mrs. James Lee Johnson, Mrs. Clinton Levering Whittemore Jr., Mrs. Walter Weaver Candy Jr., Miss Amelia Overall and Miss Magnus' cousins, Miss Janet Orthwein and Miss Helen Heisler.

The candle-lit luncheon table was decorated with a large centerpiece of white snapdragons and white sweet peas lined with pink, surrounded by silver baskets filled with lilies of the valley.

Preece was born in London, 28 years ago, and came to St. Louis about six years ago, upon arrival of note and played at Meadowbrook Club, Long Island, in 1931 in the last match between the American and Argentine teams. He was educated in England and in Friends' Academy, Westbury, Long Island.

Miss Magnus, who is 22 years old, attended Mary Institute and was graduated from Miss Wright's School, Byram Mawr, Pa. She was presented to society at a hunt ball at the Bridespur Club. She spent most of 1931 on a world tour.

Her father is a son of Mrs. J. W. Loeb of Chicago, who was Miss Nellie Busch, daughter of Adolphus Busch. Her mother, before her marriage to Magnus, was Miss Nellie Orthwein, daughter of Mr. William D. Orthwein of 15 Portland place.

MRS. ELIZABETH LANE DIES AT AGE OF 98

Cousin of Senator Benton Voted in Every Election Since Women Got Ballot.

Mrs. Elizabeth Carrie Lane, a second cousin of Thomas Hart Benton, famous Missouri Senator, and by marriage, of Henry Clay, died of infirmities last night at her home, 4344 Beethoven avenue. She was 98 years old and had been ill two weeks.

Her mind remained clear until a few hours before she died, according to relatives, and she maintained a lively interest in affairs of the day until her last illness. She had voted in every major election since Missouri women won the ballot in 1920.

Mrs. Lane was brought to St. Louis in 1824, three weeks after her birth, by her father, John Jackson Hart, who migrated across the prairies from Henderson, Ky., and settled on a farm near what is now the Seventh boulevard site of the old Green Tree brewery. Several years later they moved to Cole County, where Mrs. Lane lived until 30 years ago. Her husband, Jesse Morrison Lane, a carpenter, died 54 years ago.

During the recent presidential campaign, Mrs. Lane, a member of the D. A. R., expressed strong opinion on candidates and issues. She thought the Socialist program would be "fine, if it worked," and said she would vote for Roosevelt "not only this year, but in 1936, too."

She is survived by her son, Hart Claude Lane, with whom she resided; four grandchildren, Ben, Janet and Jean Lane and Mrs. Jessie Billings, and one great-grandchild.

Funeral services will be held at Christy Memorial Methodist Church at 2 p. m. tomorrow, with burial in Sunset Burial Park.

The statement was signed by William Schneider, president; J. F. Greenway, cashier; and W. E. Koehnenbrock, G. H. Dyeck and H. E. Klosterman, directors.

A resolution adopted by the directors of the Park Savings at a meeting following the close of business yesterday, stated that the directors deemed the institution to be solvent under the State banking laws, and having sufficient assets to pay its obligations, but that "unusually heavy withdrawals in cash have been made, thus unduly depleting its cash reserves," and that in view of the situation the board deemed it advisable, in the interest of the depositors, to deliver it into the hands of the Finance Commissioner.

Attorney Tells Creditors and Referee That Utilities Man Sat in With Bankers at Secret Session.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—Only a year or two ago the name "Samuel Insull" was magic. It spelled big dividends and safety in investment. But today the name "Insull" touched the springs of grief, anger and despair in a throng which attended the first meeting of creditors of Insull Utility Investments, Inc.

An old woman in black, a young woman, a school teacher, a train conductor, a "good provider" type, ashamed of his frayed clothing—these were among the creditors.

The meeting was held in the courtroom of Garfield Charles, Referee in Bankruptcy. Judge Walter C. Lindley, called on specially to handle the Insull receiverships, was "impressed upon" by Insull and his banker-friends.

Ettelson turned to Referee Charles and proclaimed: "I want you to want you to name someone as trustee of this estate who is not under the malign influence of Insull and his underlings."

So long as Insull remained the "controlling factor" in the receiverships, the creditors' chances of receiving even a fraction of their money back are negligible, the lawyer asserted.

At times the crowd hissed the mention of Insull's name; at other times it applauded the points scored by Ettelson.

Chicago Prosecutor Who Failed in Extradition Returns. By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Charles A. Bellows, Assistant State's Attorney of Cook County, Illinois, who with Assistant State's Attorney Andrew J. Valchos went to Greece two months ago in an attempt to have Samuel Insull, former Chicago utilities magnate, extradited, returned today on the liner Champlain. Valchos, Bellows said, remained behind pending new efforts for Insull's extradition.

"I don't think we received the right co-operation in Athens," said Bellows. "The five judges who sat on the matter of extradition could not among them speak six words of English, yet they did not hesitate to pass upon the application of American laws."

"Run Away Like a Thief." Insull ran away like a thief in the night," Ettelson declared, referring to his exile in Greece and his successful fight against extradition. "Why doesn't he come back and face his accusers?"

JOHN D. INCREASES GOLF FROM 4 TO 6 HOLES A DAY

Has Said That Before the Winter Is Over He Will Play Nine.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. ORMOND BEACH, Fla., Jan. 12.—John D. Rockefeller Sr., 93 years old, yesterday increased the length of his daily golf round from four to six holes. He has boasted that before the winter is over he will play nine holes daily.

Rockefeller was in a jovial mood as he finished his round, played with three elderly ministers—the Rev. George Owen of the Ormond Beach Union Church, the Rev. Ralph Walker of Cleveland, O., and the Rev. Lester H. Bent of the Pocomoke Hills, N. Y., Baptist Church.

BUSINESS MAN SLAIN BY WIFE IN QUARREL

Parcel Service Officer Shot Dead in Their Apartment in New York City.

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Two years of brooding over the death of her son, the District Attorney's office said, led Mrs. Garnet McCabe, 44 years old, to shoot and kill her wealthy husband, Everett McCabe, 45, early today in their apartment in a mid-town hotel.

Assistant District Attorney Sylvester Cosentino, after questioning several witnesses, said that the McCabe's eldest son, Gene, died two years ago at the age of 21, and that since then Mrs. McCabe had been morbid and at times hysterical.

Cosentino said two notes indicating Mrs. McCabe had intended to kill herself were found in the apartment. One of them contained the question, "Why don't you say something about Gene once in a while?" In the other, addressed to her husband, she wrote: "Take care of the children."

Another son, George, 14, and an adopted son, Larry, are at school in Daytona, Fla., where the McCabe's have a home. A daughter, Ruth, now 21, is in school in Honolulu.

Apparently in a state bordering on collapse, Mrs. McCabe was in homicide court and held without bail for hearing next Thursday.

Two men who were overnight guests of the McCabe's at their apartment told police that before dawn today they heard loud quarreling in the McCabe's bedroom. McCabe started toward the bathroom. His wife followed him, flung open the bathroom door and shot him.

Screaming, she ran and pounded on the guest room door, crying: "I've just shot my husband!" McCabe was vice-president of the United Parcel Service.

WOMAN TO STAND BY HUSBAND WHO SHOT 3 TO DEATH

Wife Tells of Visit With Paul Barbata, Who Was Rebuked for His Attentions to Girl.

Mrs. Paul Barbata, whose husband shot and killed three members of the Salamoni family when rebuked for his attentions to 18-year-old Lillie Salamoni, told a Post-Dispatch reporter today that she would stand by her husband "until the very end."

Their 7-year-old son, Joseph, will grow up believing his father to be "a fine man," she said, and nothing ever will happen if she can prevent it to dim his present devotion to his "Daddy."

Mrs. Barbata disclosed that she visited her husband in jail and that he made a "clean breast" of the whole affair, mentioning things that by the advice of attorneys will not be divulged until later.

"When he finished his account," Mrs. Barbata related, "he said, 'Now that's my story. Now it's up to you whatever you want to do.'"

"Well, I'm sticking. And I told him that I'd be with him until the last minute."

Mrs. Barbata, who has resumed her work in a cap factory in order to support the child, doesn't like to talk of the tragic events of six nights ago when her 32-year-old husband visited the Salamoni home at 2317 Cooper street, shooting and killing Lillie and her father, Samuel, and wounding fatally her 17-year-old brother, Joseph. All agreed that his attentions to the girl consisted only in visits to her home and gifts of flowers.

But she hastened to promise that "when the time comes I will tell my story and then maybe people will think differently of Paul."

It is of his home life during the nine years of their marriage that she prefers to talk, cherishing her memory of him as "a loving father and husband."

"He was always kind and gentle," she said, "too gentle, maybe. Did you ever know a man who loved flowers who wasn't gentle?"

When Paul was a florist he loved his work.

Little Joseph, she said, knows him only as a devoted father, a playmate after school. When the tragedy occurred the news was kept from him, but the next day, she recalled, the child ran to her with a newspaper and said:

"Look, mother, there's daddy's picture and here's my name and there's your name. What's the matter, mother?"

Mrs. Barbata, who will return soon to her home at 5942 Blischoff avenue, added:

"I'm not going to let one mistake make me forget all the good things my husband did in the past. He may have made a very, very big mistake, but that doesn't change me."

C. W. MORSE DIES AT 77; FINANCIER AND SHIP BUILDER

tion with the ship contracts, Morse and his three sons and eight others were indicted by the grand jury of the District of Columbia in 1922, charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States and the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation. They were acquitted after trial in August, 1923. During the litigation Morse suffered a paralytic stroke, but regained his health and returned to his home here to retire. He had not been active for the past year.

Morse was born at Bath, Me., in 1856, and was a graduate of Bowdoin College, class of 1877. He was married twice. His first wife, Hattie Elsie Morse, died in 1897, leaving three sons, Harry, Erwin and Benjamin, and one daughter. In 1903, he married Mrs. Clemence Cowles Dodge, divorced wife of a Pullman car conductor, and they went to court to force an annulment. In the subsequent legal fight, Morse's opponents blundered into perjury, and "Abe" Hummel, a theatrical lawyer retained as counsel to block his second marriage, was sent to Blackwell's Island for one year. The second Mrs. Morse died in 1928.

Morse showed his financial acumen early. On entering Bowdoin, his father allowed him $1000 a year to keep the latter's books. The son found a youth to do the work for $500, and annually pocketed the $1000 difference.

The elder Morse was engaged in towing and shipping, and the son persuaded him to enter the ice business, which was growing rapidly on the Kennebec River. The father's boats brought coal from Baltimore and Newport News, returning empty. The son's plan provided full cargoes both ways, and started a stream of ice toward down-coast cities which eventually carried young Morse with it to the metropolis.

Morse also engaged in the ice business on the side during his college days, and was said to have actually amassed a fortune of $500,000 while still an undergraduate.

After graduating, Morse entered the ice industry on a large scale, and C. W. Morse & Co. became one of the principal shippers to New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore. Going to New York in 1897, he consolidated 31 ice companies into the $60,000,000 American Ice Co., and through close relations with Mayor Van Wyck and Tammany leaders, gained an iron-bound monopoly. Morse manipulated the stock of the new company on the market, sending it to sky-high levels in which he, Van Wyck and his other political friends did not suffer, subsequent investigation showed.

A hot mid-summer day in 1900, Morse raised the price of ice in New York from 30 to 60 cents a hundredweight. He intended to allocate the additional revenue to dividend payments on the high-priced stock. The boost caused suffering in tenement districts, created a public storm, and the price went back to 30 cents. Official inquiry, however, revealed inside methods of the operators, the stock slumped and from then on the Street "watched" Morse.

His outstanding feat in the Merchant Marine before his fall was formation of the $120,000,000 Consolidated Steamship Co., which absorbed all the principal coastal companies. He also controlled at one time the principal traffic on the Hudson River as a result of the merger of the night freight and passenger lines between New York, Albany and Troy.

MANY OUT-OF-TOWN AUTO SHOW VISITORS

Display of New Cars in Terminal Building Will Close Saturday.

The annual St. Louis Automobile Show entered today into its last three days at the Midwest Terminal Building, on Twelfth boulevard between Lucas avenue and Morgan street. The exhibition, which opens each morning at 11 o'clock, will close Saturday midnight.

Besides visitors from St. Louis the crowds attending the show are composed of numerous persons throughout the St. Louis trading area.

Many new features of appointment, design and engineering efficiency are incorporated in the new 1933 models, displayed attractively against a purple and gold background.

No Draft Ventilation.
There are several exhibits demonstrating the benefits of the new no-draft ventilation system for closed cars. All such models made by one company have windows so constructed that ventilation can be individually controlled by driver and passengers and air in the car changed continually, yet drafts are prevented. Operation of the system is shown by streamers in the windows of several closed cars against which large electric fans push steady streams of air.

Another make of car has a ventilating system that makes use of the semi-vacuum at the front of the rear quarter windows to do away with drafts yet thoroughly ventilate the car interior.

A high-priced car has front windows split down the center, with each half pivoted with an automatic catch to hold the halves in any desired position. This permits ventilation in any weather, yet prevents rain from entering and prevents the windshield and glass in the car from steaming over or frosting.

Wherever cowl ventilators are used they are screened. In one make, the cowl can be kept open in any weather, moisture being trapped in the ventilator and carried outside.

New Continental Arrives.
A feature of streamlining the bodies of certain makes is the carrying of the back ends down below the bumpers to yield the bodies against kicking up of gravel and dirt.

Stripped chassis of several makes daily attract crowds, and the lecturers on mechanical features are always assured of audiences.

The new Continental car is to be on display for the first time today. It is a standard tread car, with a new engine mounting and rear spring hanging, and several special design features.

One of the interesting exhibits at the show, contrasting with the modern models, is a 1903 Cadillac four-passenger sport car. It has buggy fenders, reversed rear seat and headlamps of the type used then on carriages. It was driven to the show under its own power.

HEMP & CO. OFFERS
TERMS TO CREDITORS

Seeks to Abandon Plant Here but Operate That at Macomb, Ill.

General creditors of Hemp & Co., manufacturers of sheet metal products here since 1883, against which a bankruptcy petition was filed recently, are considering a composition offer, involving the abandonment of the company's main plant at 1839 South Vandeventer avenue and the continuance of its subsidiary plant at Macomb, Ill.

The offer, presented to Referee in Bankruptcy Coles yesterday by the company's attorney, Walter R. Mayne, provides for issuance of the company's three-year notes for 97 per cent of the creditors' claims, aggregating about $100,000, plus free assets of a book value of $109,000, to be turned over to a creditors' committee for additional protection. The offer provides also for the payment of the committee's expenses up to $3000. Claims entitled to priority by law would be paid in full.

Joseph L. Hemp, secretary-treasurer of the company, told the referee that general creditors had received a payment of 25 per cent of their claims last August. The company is capitalized at $400,000 and has listed liabilities of $301,607 against assets with a book value of $750,803. The company, owned by the Hemp family, was unable to meet its current accounts in full, Hemp said.

Hemp testified that the company had been profitable since its inception until 1921, when it lost about $45,000. The loss last year, he said, was about $250,000, so that the company's surplus was wiped out.

About six years ago, after the demand for the company's principal product, stoves, had declined materially, it branched out into other lines, the witness said, manufacturing steelware such as cabinets and household products. The change, successful at first, he said, did not meet the conditions of the depression and the company began to lose. Present overhead expenses, he said, were 90 per cent less than they were last year. His salary had been cut from $30,000 in 1927 to $4800 at present, he said.

RAIL EXECUTIVE DEAD

BERNARD H. COYLE

Stricken With Heart Disease While Attending Dinner at M. A. A.

Bernard H. Coyle, assistant general freight agent for the Wabash Railroad, in charge of the St. Louis district, died suddenly of heart disease last night while attending a dinner at the Missouri Athletic Association. He was 72 years old. Mr. Coyle left the dining room on the third floor about 8 o'clock, complaining of illness, and asked Albert H. Orr, 5143 Waterman avenue, to accompany him to the lobby. There he lay on a lounge, and a doctor was summoned. Fifteen minutes later, when Dr. W. M. Hansen arrived, he was pronounced dead.

The dinner was one given by the St. Louis Fruit & Produce Association at which President Walter J. G. Neun of the Board of Aldermen was the principal speaker. For more than 17 years Mr. Coyle had been in the railroad business, the last 39 of them with the Wabash. He came to St. Louis in 1893 to enter the employ of that railroad. From 1918 until 1927 he was division freight agent and then was appointed to the post he held at his death.

Until 1926 he made his home in Alton and commuted daily between there and St. Louis. Since then he has lived at 5888 Cabanne avenue. During 33 years of commuting he estimated he had traveled 495,000 miles between St. Louis and Alton. Surviving are his widow, three daughters and a son. Other survivors are a brother, P. H. Coyle, who retired in 1931, after many years as traffic director for the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, and two sisters, who live in the East.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—Milton Fin- gold, 25 years old, was released by police last night when investigation failed to connect him with the slaying of his father, Joseph Fin- gold, 49, shop keeper on Upper Michigan avenue.

MUSIC PUBLISHER, FUGITIVE 15 YEARS, IS BACK IN PRISON

Business Associate Seeking Freedom of Glenn Smeeman Discloses They Are Brothers.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 12.—Glenn Smeeman, Colorado former fugitive, known as Harry Stanley, is a brother of his business associate, George A. Bronson, who has been active in efforts to obtain a pardon for the Ohio music publisher.

This was disclosed by Smeeman and Bronson soon after Gov. Edwin C. Johnson yesterday denied Smeeman, or Stanley, permission to return to his business pending formal application for a pardon. Smeeman was returned to the Colorado State Penitentiary at Canon City today by Warden Roy Best.

"Sure, we're brothers," said Smeeman.

And from Bronson: "Look alike? Certainly. We are blood brothers, although the fact has been more or less secret."

The Governor told Smeeman he would be glad to consider a fugitive request for a pardon or parole. He expressed sympathy for the publisher's pretty 20-year-old wife, who was taken to a hospital in a highly nervous state. Smeeman said her condition was not serious. She has a 3-month-old daughter.

Smeeman's appearance before the Colorado Chief Executive, who took office this week, was brief. He told the Governor he had "made good" in Cleveland since his escape from a convict road camp in Boulder nearly 15 years ago. At that time he was serving a three-year sentence for motor car theft.

Bronson told of Smeeman's position of responsibility in Cleveland. Gov. Johnson asked Mrs. Stanley if she had anything to say, and after replying that "everything necessary had been said," she burst into tears and was taken from the room, weeping hysterically.

Bronson explained that when he the younger of the brothers, left the Canon City prison, where he also served a term for auto theft, he lived with a family by the name of Bronson and he took their name. He had worked himself up to a position of responsibility in Cleveland when the older of the brothers appeared and took the name of Stanley. Together they started in business and prospered.

The Bronsons were born at Grand Rapids, Mich. Later their father, a retired music equipment dealer, purchased a ranch near Elizabeth, Colo. Bronson said the father died while both were still young and their stepmother received most of the estate.

Bronson will accompany his brother to Canon City. He will visit Captain of Guards B. Spurgeon, who has become his close friend since Bronson finished his sentence. Bronson has returned to Canon City each summer for trout fishing.

Denver authorities received word from Sheriff Madden, St. Louis, yesterday, to hold Smeeman for return to that city, where he jumped bond in 1916, to evade serving a two-year penitentiary sentence for automobile theft.

Smeeman told reporters that his new troubles with the law were due to information furnished to Colorado authorities by a woman known as "Lulu," whom he met when a young man after he had been paroled from a Michigan reformatory where he was serving a term for stealing a bicycle.

"She was old enough to be my mother," he said. "She took me to St. Louis and one night the police found a stolen automobile in our garage. I was charged with automobile theft and jumped a $2000 bond. I went to Denver with Lulu and was arrested again, this time for stealing an automobile that she had obtained. I never implicated her, and took the sentence myself. "I thought she was out of my life but she turned up a couple of weeks ago. She demanded $1000 from me to keep quiet about my identity. I knew if I made one payment I'd be paying for the rest of my life. I refused to pay, and she informed the Colorado authorities of my record."

Man, 84, Hit by Street Car Dies in Hospital.

Louis Clark, 84, died at City Hospital today of a fractured skull suffered yesterday morning when he was struck by a Delmar street car at Sixth and Olive streets.

Motorman Walter Cole reported he was unable to avoid hitting Clark, who, Cole said, stepped into the path of the car at the west crossing.

Clark was formerly custodian of United Hebrew Temple. He retired several years ago, residing at the Illinois Hotel, 808 Franklin avenue.

Frozen Loans Blamed; Demand Deposits of $291,000 and Time Deposits of $399,524.

ANNA, Ill., Jan. 12.—The First National Bank, with assets of $900,000 failed to open for business today, having closed by resolution last night of the board of directors. John W. Roy is president and Oliver Alden cashier.

The last statement issued Sept. 30 showed demand deposits of $291,000; time deposits of $399,524; bills payable of $102,710; capital $50,000 and surplus $15,000.

The bank was the oldest in Union County. Two years ago the bank's troubles began with slow payment of loans, brought about by fruit crop failures and low prices. With a change in cashiers a year ago a 5 per cent monthly withdrawal regulation was imposed which was accepted by the customers without complaint. The bank's officers said, however, collections were impossible.

ANNA, Ill., Jan. 12.—The First National Bank, with assets of $900,000 failed to open for business today, having closed by resolution last night of the board of directors. John W. Roy is president and Oliver Alden cashier.

The last statement issued Sept. 30 showed demand deposits of $291,000; time deposits of $399,524; bills payable of $102,710; capital $50,000 and surplus $15,000.

The bank was the oldest in Union County. Two years ago the bank's troubles began with slow payment of loans, brought about by fruit crop failures and low prices. With a change in cashiers a year ago a 5 per cent monthly withdrawal regulation was imposed which was accepted by the customers without complaint. The bank's officers said, however, collections were impossible.

HOUSE BODY CUTS GOV. PARK SHUTS $31,584,000 FROM OUT JOB-HUNTERS ARMY WAR FUNDS AND GETS TO WORK

Non-Military Activities
$79,324,000 Under Last Year but $50,000,000 Is Non-Recurring Work.

To Spend Remainder of the Week Confering
With Legislators on Legislative Program.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The continuing drive for economy brought to the House today from its Appropriations Committee a bill recommending $31,584,000 less to carry on the military activities of the War Department next year than was allowed for this. The same measure also allowed $79, 324,000 less for non-military work.

The bill would allow $273,079,000 for military and $72,423,000 for non-military activities for the 1934 fiscal year. This was an apparent reduction of $110,000,000 from this year, but $80,000,000 of this was accounted for by non-recurring emergency construction.

Among the principal items in the bill are: $29,388,000 for rivers and harbors maintenance work; $228, 484 for Muscle Shoals; $19,853,000 for Mississippi River flood control; $768,480 for flood control on the Sacramento River, California; $11,
106,000 for the Panama Canal; $2,
384,000 for the Reserve Officers' Training Corps; $25,000,000 for the National Guard; $1,344,000 for West Point; $2,083,000 for seacoast defenses; $1,803,000 for chemical warfare; $23,537,000 for the Army Air Corps; $50,828,000 for the Quartermaster Corps and $128,185,000 for pay of the army.

No Provision for C. M. T. C.
Excluded from the bill was $1, 000,000 asked by the Budget Bureau for continuation of citizens' military training camps. In a statement, Chairman Collins of the Appropriations subcommittee which recommended the suspension of C.
M. T. C. activities, said:

"The budget includes $1,000,000 for this component, which would occasion a reduction in the number of trainees from 37,500 to 15,000. To effect this reduction would cause injustice and much more discrimination than at present."

The measure also would permit the National Guard to motorize all field artillery regiments with light commercial vehicles, continue the officer strength of the Army at 12-000 instead of shorten the training period for members of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps from 43 to 26 days and cut recruiting expenses in half.

Likewise, it would allow the Air Corps to make contracts for new planes to the extent of $3,000,000 in addition to giving an outright appropriation of $2,537,000 to that branch.

Although the bill made no specific allocations of funds for rivers and harbors or flood control works, the committee allowed, without change, the amounts asked by the Budget Bureau.

As to Flood Control.
Testimony that the budget estimate for flood control during the 1934 fiscal year would mean a sharp reduction in the work was given a subcommittee during hearings.

Gen. Geo. B. Pillsbury said that, including unexpended balances left over from other appropriations, the amount to be spent on flood control work during 1934 would be about $20,000,000. He said, however, if the outcome of court action for the procurement of flowage rights on the Bonnet Carré and New Madrid floodways was adverse to the Government, the amount might be considerably less.

Gen. Pillsbury said the $19,853,424 would be used in part as follows:
For completing levees: In Missouri and Arkansas: between Cape Girardeau and Helena below Helena, and in the Mississippi and Upper Yazoo Basin, $3,000,000; in Mississippi in the Lower Yazoo Basin and in Louisiana between the Arkansas and Red Rivers, $2,200,000.

An advance from fourth to third rank in the world's military air-strength was asserted for the United States by F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War for Aviation, in testimony.

"When we combine the Army and the Navy, we stand third in the world today, whereas last year we stood fourth," he said.

"When we take simply the Army air strength alone, as compared with the land air strength of other Powers alone, we stand fourth this year as against fifth last year....
"So far as our equipment is concerned, I am perfectly willing to make this statement and I believe it to be true, that so far as planes are concerned, in performance and efficiency, we lead the world at present."

THOMAS L. MAULDIN DIES
AT SPRINGFIELD, ILL., HOME Until Three Years Ago Had Been in Dry Goods and Shoe Business in St. Louis

By CURTIS A. BETTS,

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-
Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 12.—Gov.
Park closed his door to job seekers today and instructed his secretary to make no appointments for him except on urgent State business.

He will devote the remainder of the week to conferring with Senators and Representatives on his program for economy legislation, including bills to abolish useless departments and bureaus and to consolidate many State agencies.

The Governor said he intended to summon experienced legislators and to ask them to prepare the bills to carry out his ideas, and that on a number of bills he expected to adopt the measure drawn by the voluntary committee on economy and governmental reform headed by Senator Bales of Shannon County. He conferred with Bales yesterday.

Since his inauguration Monday, much of the Governor's time has been occupied with "deserving and needy Democrats." His outer office has been crowded from the opening of the doors in the morning until their close in the evening.
Desiring to get his legislative program under way, he said today he was forced to deny himself to all callers except those he summoned.

The Park program undoubtedly will be made a Democratic caucus matter in the House, if its fate in the Senate awaits developments.

Democratic Floor Leader Keating today said it was his intention to put the entire program through the House. "The Democratic party is on record for a real program of economy," he said. "Gov. Park was elected by a tremendous majority and the people look to him for real accomplishment. He has studied the subject, and he will have bills to carry out a well thought-out program."

"There are only 11 Republicans in the House, and, of course, they could not interfere if they were so disposed. The Democrats are going to carry out the party pledge and these bills will be made cauc-sus measures and the Democrats will be pledged in caucus to support them. That will guarantee their passage."

"I think the Democrats in the Legislature can safely assume that when one of these bills has the Governor's approval it should be enacted into law."

"MOIST THROAT" FOUND SECRET OF COUGH RELIEF

Your throat and bronchial tubes are lined with millions of pores like tiny bottles continually supplying moisture to the delicate tissues... until you "catch cold."

Then these "bottles" get plugged up, phlegm accumulates, your throat feels hot and dry, tickling, irritation and coughing set in.

Your cough will be cured only when the flow of the natural fluid is increased, loosening the phlegm so that it can be expelled. Many cough "remedies" contain numbing drugs which merely deadens the nerves... but don't get at the root of the trouble.

Pertussin, a scientific remedy, which doctors have prescribed for many years, is an extract of a famous herb which opens the tiny glands, stimulates the flow of the throat's natural moisture and brings quick relief. It helps nature heal that cough from the inside on.

When you feel that warring dryness take a few drops of Pertussin. It's absolutely safe. Sold at all drug stores, 50c.

HOUSE VOTES FOR DOUBLE CHECK ON STATE PAYROLLS

Powers of Chairman Sharply Curtailed in Action Begun by the Committee on Accounts.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 12.—The House Committee on Accounts, at a meeting this morning, adopted stringent regulations for the auditing of accounts, closely curtailing the powers the chairman has exercised at many previous sessions of the Legislature.

The meeting, called after a conference of members exclusive of John B. Haskell, the chairman, was attended by Haskell, who offered no objection to the procedure proposed.

Haskell's selection as chairman by Speaker Meredith Tuesday was the subject of much comment by members of the House because he was chairman of the same committee two years ago when State Treasurer charged after an investigation, the State lost at least $200,000 through the payment of fraudulent payroll and supplies accounts.

Speaker Meredith, explaining his action, said Haskell's appointment was due to his indorsement by all the Jackson County delegation and because the entire delegation had supported him (Meredith) for election as Speaker. He said he had appointed a "strong" committee to serve under Haskell.

Summary of Resolution.

At the meeting this morning before the House convened, the committee adopted a resolution, which later was adopted by the House, specifically directing that the action of any committee involving the expenditure of money or the incurring of financial obligations should be certified by both the chairman and the ranking member of the committee, and directing the State Auditor to refuse to pay any accounts which did not contain the double indorsement.

The resolution was submitted by the committee to Majority Floor Leader Keating of Jackson County, who introduced it, and it was passed by the House without debate.

In previous Legislatures it has been the practice of the chairman of the Accounts Committee to pass personally on all accounts, without even calling the committee into session. Under this resolution the State Auditor is directed to pay no bills incurred by the House unless they are indorsed by both Haskell and Representative Cook of Madison County.

At the meeting in addition to Haskell, who was summoned after the other committee members in private conference had agreed on their action, were Representatives Cook, Job of Nodaway County, Weakley of Pike County, Corbett of Newton County and Gardner of St. Louis. Representative Stoltz of

SAYS UNION ORDERED HIM OFF JOB, SEEKS $50,000

Plumber Testifies in Suit in Federal Court at East St. Louis.

Patrick J. Kehoe, 3805 Finney avenue, former plumber of East St. Louis, testified yesterday in the Federal Court at East St. Louis, that he was forced to leave a plumbing job at the Curtiss-Stearns Airport, and dropped from good standing in the East St. Louis union by its officers and other union members. He asks for damages of $50,000.

The suit was originally directed against the Master Plumbers' Association of East St. Louis and 30 officers and members of the East St. Louis local, No. 360, United Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steamfitters.

Kehoe, a former member of the East St. Louis local, testified he and three co-workers were threatened by officers and members of the local and forced to leave the airport job. When they again attempted to work under protection of the Sheriff, he said, they were suspended and fined, and did not regain their memberships.

Local members and officers will testify today.

Gasconade, the only Republican member, was not present.

Committee Outlines Rules.

After agreeing on the resolution which was adopted by the House, the committee laid out its rules of procedure.

These provide that instead of the chairman's having the authority assumed by chairman generally in the past of acting without consulting the committee, the committee shall meet twice each month, and that no bills shall be approved except by majority vote of the seven members of the committee.

All statements shall be submitted in duplicate to the committee, one copy to be retained and made a committee record. All actions of the committee shall be recorded in detail as minutes of the meetings and signed by the chairman and ranking member.

It was voted that the committee would not pay any account until the investigation had been completed.

"This committee does not go on records," one of the rules adopted read, "as refusing to pay any statement found to be incorrect or excessive in amounts."

The rules also provide that all statements submitted shall first be certified as correct by the individual for whom or for whose department the goods were purchased.

Representative Weakley of the committee, announced the rules from the floor of the House. "It seems our committee is in disrepute before it is even started," he said. "Here are the rules we have adopted for our procedure." He then read the rules to the House.

MRS. ELLEN L. REGAN DIES;
NIECE SAYS SHE WAS 102

Active Until Year Ago When Sight Began to Fail, Funeral Tomorrow Morning.

Mrs. Ellen Lahert Regan, said to have been 102 years old, died yesterday of infirmities at 5565 (rear) Wabasha avenue, where she resided with a niece, Mrs. Mary Sherman.

Mrs. Sherman said she did not have a record of the date of Mrs. Regan's birth, but established her age at 102, knowing she was 10 years younger than her sister, Mrs. Mary Lahert of Independence, Mo., who died 12 years ago at 100.

Mrs. Regan was active mentally and physically until about a year ago, when her sight began to fail. Born in Tipperary County, Ireland, she came to this country on a sailing vessel about 80 years ago, settling in Pittsburgh, Pa. In 1877 she went to Kansas City, married and settled on a farm. After her husband's death she lived on the farm alone for 30 years, coming here 12 years ago. She was present at Lincoln's funeral in Washington in 1865.

Her funeral will be held tomorrow at 9 a. m. at St. Edward's Catholic Church, 2701 Clara avenue, where she had attended mass every morning until a year ago. Burial will take place in Calvary Cemetery.

POLICE SAY MAN OFFERED $300 TO HAVE WIFE KILLED

Husband Arrested in Los Angeles, Denies Charge of Detective Who Tells of Negotiations.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 12.—Gerald A. Craig, 39 years old, was arrested last night charged with conspiracy to murder his wife, Mrs. Ethel Craig, 40. Police said he offered an unnamed informer $300 to beat Mrs. Craig to death, so he could obtain full control of community property.

Police said they were told of the scheme by the man Craig first approached in the matter. This man is said to have referred Craig to Detective-Lieutenant T. R. Bryan, who, disguised in shabby clothes, negotiated the details with Craig.

Police said the killing was to have been done yesterday. Mrs. Craig was kept under guard in Detective Headquarters. Craig, police said, had explained the floor plan of his residence to Bryan, gave him a key to the house and told him where he would find an iron bar.

Bryan called on Craig in a garage, where he was employed as foreman, and told him the "job is done." Bryan said, when they drove to a designated spot to collect the money, Craig leaped into his own automobile and raced for his home. Three other detectives arrested him.

Craig denied plotting to kill his wife. He met Mrs. Craig in the jail corridor as he was led to a cell. He kissed her and she broke into tears.

Craig was captain of the 1916 University of Southern California football team. He now is superintendent of a truck garage. Mrs. Craig, formerly Ethel Morley of Los Angeles, is prominent in club circles. Mrs. Craig said the only intimation she had of an estrangement between herself and her husband came several weeks ago when she "suspected him of being interested in another woman."

LIBBY HOLMAN PLANS FIGHT FOR TRUST FUND

Wants Third of Interest for Self and Two-thirds for Her Child.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Plans for a legal fight to insure that the son of Libby Holman Reynolds gets a part of the trust fund set up for Zachary Smith Reynolds by his father, R. J. Reynolds, founder of the tobacco fortune, were made today as the baby lay in an incubator "hotbed" in Pennsylvania Hospital in Philadelphia.

Arnold J. Brock, attorney, announced his first move would be an attempt to obtain about $3,000,000 income that has accumulated from the trust, and then move for possession of the $15,000,000 fund itself.

One-third of the accumulated interest, Brock said, will be claimed for the former Broadway singer and two-thirds for the child.

Brock expects to confer, within a few days, with Mrs. Reynolds, and attempt to decide whether to contest the will of Smith Reynolds, shot to death on his North Carolina estate last July 6. In that will, drawn up a short time before the heir to the cigarette fortune married the singer, Reynolds left his estate to his brother, Richard, and his sisters, Mrs. Nancy R. Bagley and Mrs. Mary Babcock.

The will has been filed by the Guaranty Trust Co., named temporary administrator.

Brock indicated a contest of the will might be made on the ground Reynolds was not a resident of New York, where the instrument was executed, or on the ground that, being made before Reynolds' marriage, it was invalid.

RECEIVERS NAMED FOR $131,000,000 MORTGAGE FIRM

President and Director to Continue Business Pending Reorganization of Philadelphia Concern.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 12.—Receivers in equity for the Philadelphia Company for Guaranteeing Mortgages were appointed yesterday in Federal District Court in what officers of the concern said was a move to permit reorganization.

The business of the company, which in its last report, Jan. 1, said it stood as guarantor for 10,000 mortgages, valued at $131,911,474, is to be continued by the receivers pending the reorganization.

The receivers, Thomas Shallos, president of the company, and John Arthur Brown, a director, were appointed on petition of William S. Boyan of Audubon, N. J., a stockholder, which was filed as a friendly action to permit the reorganization.

The company, incorporated in 1907, is one of the largest of its kind in Philadelphia. It has a present financial condition, which is a result of existing conditions, was preferable to a ruthless foreclosure of mortgages, which are essentially sound and are in default merely as a result of existing conditions.

The statement said that "in a large majority of cases, interest on the guaranteed mortgages is being paid, and under the plans contemplated by the receivers there will be no interruption in the remittance of the net amount, as collected, to the holders of securities entitled thereto."

"An independent and representative committee for the protection of the interests of the holders of securities is being formed, which committee proposes to draft and submit to security holders a plan of reorganization."

"It is understood that the committee will, in the near future, call for the deposit of securities and that the co-operation of very substantial holdings has already been assured."

Cause of Difficulty.

The temporary difficulty in which the company finds itself is stated to be due to the fact that mortgages carrying the company's guarantees are in many cases of short maturity; that in normal times the property owners have no difficulty in replacing or refinancing sound mortgages, but under the conditions that existed during the past two or three years refinancing or replacing of mortgages as they mature have been practically impossible.

The statement was addressed to holders of mortgages and bonds guaranteed by the company, in which there are 1500 stockholders and which has more than 8000 security holders.

The company engages in the business of guaranteeing principal and interest of first mortgages on real estate and acting as agent for the holders of mortgages in the collection of interest and the servicing of properties.

'TODDY' DILLON ON FACULTY OF JOLIET CONVICT SCHOOL

Former St. Louis Youth and Loeb, Slayer of Bobby Franks, Among Instructors.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JOLIET, Ill., Jan. 12.—"Toddy" Dillon, once held for inquiry in the unexplained murder of his father, Dr. William A. Dillon, of St. Louis, is a member of the faculty of the new school for convicts which opened its courses at the State prison here yesterday.

Dillon, serving five concurrent sentences of one to 20 years for holdups in Chicago, is "professor of English literature" in the school, which is giving high school courses. At the time of the murder of his father on April 20, 1928, Dillon was a freshman at Kansas University. Later he was sent to Sing Sing for robbery in New York, but was paroled.

Courses in the new school will be given by correspondence under personal supervision of the teachers, instead of by classroom work. Other teachers include Richard Loeb of Chicago, serving a life sentence for the murder of Bobby Franks, and Joseph Purcell, Peoria attorney, serving a sentence for kidnapping, who is "professor of Latin."

FEES OF $13,000 ALLOWED IN JOHN SCULLIN WILL CASE

Attorneys to Whom Award is Made Took Part in Suit to Construe Testament.

Fees totaling $13,000 were allowed attorneys in the suit to construe the will of John Scullin, capitalist, by Circuit Judge Hall yesterday. The awards will be paid from the trust estate of Scullin and are as follows: Thompson, Mitchell, Jones & Young, $5000; Carter, Thompson & Turner, $2000; Jacob M. Lashly, $2000; and $1500 each to Ewart, Reynolds & Kavin and to Thomas M. Pierce.

The suit involved the right of the trustees to lend $300,000 to the Scullin Steel Co. from funds of the trust estate. Judge Hall authorized the loan. Harry Scullin, one of the beneficiaries of the estate, is president of the steel company.

CANADIAN PROTEST AGAINST FIRING BY U. S. COAST GUARD

Skippers of Three Ships Say
They Were Attacked
When They Weren't in American Waters.

By the Associated Press.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Jan. 12.—In a protest filed with the Customs Department at Ottawa, masters of three Canadian vessels charged yesterday that a United States Coast Guard detail had fired on the ships, boarded them and otherwise interfered with their passage. The masters of the three boats said they were not outside Canadian waters, but the report from the Coast Guard was that any action took place in American waters. The alleged incidents occurred off the coast of Vancouver Island on a stormy December night.

The vessels are the Kitayakwa, the Skeenik and the Sundown, with Vancouver their home port.

According to the reports, the cutters first fired star shells to light the water, and landed shells from one-pounders over the Kitayakwa and Skeenik, before putting a boarding crew aboard. The Sundown, according to the master, was stopped, but was not boarded when a protest was made the ship was in Canadian waters.

The master of the Kitayakwa reported that when outboard from Vancouver three miles off shore and abreast Sherringham Light, he sighted a vessel off the port bow. The Canadian boat bore north toward the Vancouver Island shore. Proceeding for half a mile, it ran into another vessel, went south, and encountered still another.

The vessel to the south opened fire, and the Kitayakwa started away full speed, pursued by a fourth craft. One rained rapidly and opened fire with a machine gun. It ranged alongside and ordered the Canadian to stop, the master said. The American told the master that he was acting jointly for Canadian and American customs. He placed a line aboard the Kitayakwa and towed it toward Victoria, the towline being guarded by a machine gun and crew on the stern of the cutter overlooking the Kitayakwa. Half an hour later, however, the Canadian vessel was cast free and allowed to proceed, the captain said.

RELIEF WOEFULLY INADEQUATE, SAY PAYNE AND GREEN

MILLIONS SUFFER BODILY AND MORALLY

Half of People Below
Health Standard, Says
Labor Chief; Railway
men's Suggestions Heard.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
Staff Correspondent of the Post-
Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—In the manufacturers' Committee today, heads of America's greatest retail and labor organizations described desperate privation in every section of the country, and asserted that existing relief facilities were grossly inadequate.

Senators were told that, in addition to actual, acute misery, millions of Americans are suffering psychic and moral damage which could be permanent. They heard of new generation of undersized, unnourished boys and girls, skeptical of the value of the "old-fashioned virtues," cynical toward a government which had left them no alternatives of starving or sitting for themselves.

The principal witnesses were John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. Payne's
able change since the occasion a year ago when he appeared before the same committee and insisted that private agencies could cope with the problem of relief. Green remarked that he never had entertained such a belief.

What Red Cross Has Done.
The committee learned from Payne that free flour has been distributed in 2959 of the 3075 counties of the United States. Among the 6 counties which has not received free flour, Payne said, a number, such as the one consisting of the great Salt Lake and that embracing Yellowstone Park, are uninhabited.

"In other words," remarked Senator Cordell, "you haven't distributed any flour on the bosom of Lake Michigan, but have almost everywhere else." "That's about it," Judge Payne agreed.

Congress ordered 40,000,000 bushels of Farm Board wheat turned over to the Red Cross last March, and in July ordered 45,000,000 bushels more turned over. In addition, authorized the Farm Board to surrender 500,000 bales of cotton to the Red Cross, for distribution among the needy. Judge Payne summarized the results as follows:

Up to Jan. 7, 7,670,000 barrels of our had been distributed among 750,000 families; 223,000 tons of free livestock had been given out; 3,000,000 yards of cloth had been distributed in the form of dresses, underwear and night clothing among 4,400,000 families. Only 20-30,000 bushels of the wheat remains, and all the cotton is gone.

"To what extent has this distribution met the demand?" asked Senator La Follette. "I should estimate that we have supplied about 20 per cent of the need," was the reply.

Green told the committee that the need for relief is increasing much more rapidly than unemployment, "because the savings of the unemployed are rapidly being exhausted."

"Nearly half the population is now living below the standards necessary to maintain health," he said.
Recalling that Government agencies have fixed $7.50 a week as the minimum upon which an average family can safely exist, Green said that the average relief allowance in August was $4.08 a week, and conditions have grown steadily worse.

Thus far, he pointed out, nearly all the funds made available for relief have been expended for food alone. He predicted that an increasing amount would be necessary for clothing and rent.

"Distress in the coal mining fields beggars description," he continued.
The word "terrible" is inadequate.
We are aware of conditions in the cities, but it is difficult to imagine the situation out in the isolated mining communities."

Traditional Spirit Broken.
Green declared that "private relief agencies have almost broken down." He said the situation had continued for so long that "it has lost its human appeal—people have become accustomed to the sight of suffering."

"What is your impression of the moral and spiritual consequences?"
asked Senator La Follette. "The breakdown in moral standards. Men and women have lost hope. They are no longer the same type of people. We are creating a new kind of Americans, totally lacking in the traditional American spirit of optimism and self-reliance." He

LEGISLATORS ASKED TO SIGN

PETITION FOR JUDGE FARIS
It seeks His Elevation to Succeed Van Valkenburgh on Appellate Bench.

By the Associated Press.
JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 12.—A petition asking the elevation of Federal District Judge Charles B. Faris, St. Louis, to a Federal Appellate judgeship, is being circulated here among members of the Legislature. About 80 members of the lower House had signed the pe-tion yesterday. Circulators of the petition said they expected to get the signature of nearly every one of the 139 Democratic members of the lower House before sending the petition to President-elect Roosevelt.

If appointed, Judge Faris would fill the vacancy caused by the recent retirement of Judge A. S. Van Valkenburgh. Judge Faris has been 22 years consecutively on the bench—nine years as a member of the Missouri Supreme Court and 13 years as a Federal Judge. He was appointed District Judge by President Wilson in 1919.

SYMPHONY PLAYS FOR NEGROES

A capacity audience of Negro high school students at the Odeon yesterday afternoon heard the regular public school concert of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. The program included first presentation of a suite of Negro folk music, including an air from British Guiana, a Martinique melody and melodies from St. Helena Island, composed by Major N. Clark Smith, director of music in Negro schools of St. Louis.

The Summer High Schools girls' glee club presented a choral number, the Vashon High School mixed chorus sang "Opportunity" by W. C. Handy and the entire audience joined in "Lift Every Voice" by J. Rosamond Johnson.

HOW INVENTIONS HAVE ALTERED THE SOCIAL SYSTEM

of prime movers in factories, mines and electric plants increased much faster—nearly 50 per cent between 1917 and 1927. This great power capacity is often represented, the report says, as the equivalent of about 100 slaves per person.

New Sources of Power Sought.

"Power," the report continues, "has been such a help to mankind that it is usually at the forefront in imagination, and there has been much speculation about future sources. Electrical power from tide and waves are old dreams, and there are experimental stations off the coast of France. The sun as a source of power is another idea that will not down, and there are certain regions that could benefit greatly if this idea should be realized. The heating of water or oil by mirrored rays has not led to much optimism, but several methods for deriving electrical energy directed from sandwich cells activated by sunlight are now reported, the most recent and successful using silver selenide.

"More realistic perhaps are the experiments now being made in substituting for water in boilers other liquids such as mercury with a high boiling point, or sulphur dioxide with a low boiling point, all to increase efficiency. Claude's spectacular success in 1930, after two very costly wrecks, in producing power from the wide temperature differences between surface and deep sea water in the Caribbean may perhaps help in possible future upbuilding of that zone, where there is little coal or available water power.

Cooling Systems.

An important new development in building is air control for coolness and moisture content. This has been extended to theaters, restaurants, hotels, offices, and railroad trains, and the report suggests it may be a step "in the further development of cultures in Southern climates.

Machines in agriculture are "adding to the equipment cost of farms, requiring new knowledge and skills, increasing production, introducing marketing problems, causing further migration from farms and increasing the size of farms, and thus perhaps taking agriculture a step nearer to the corporate organization.

The report forecasts significant social effects if the use of a mechanical cotton picker should become general in the South. The small marginal farmer, who "has been back of some interesting political and social movements," would suffer, and large-scale farming would be encouraged. The migration of Negroes to the cities would be stimulated, and this would affect race relations and the future of the Negro.

Inter-related Inventions.

From their exhaustive data on inventions, the authors draw several general conclusions. For example:

"An invention often has many effects spreading out like a fan. Thus the automobile not only aids the growth of suburbs and redistributes marketing areas, but it cuts revenue of railroads and encourages the consolidating of rural schools.

"A social change often represents the combined contributions of many inventions. Thus the growth of suburbs is stimulated not only by the automobile but by the electric train, the street car, the moving picture, the telephone, the radio and the future of the Negro.

"Intentional causes and social effects are intertwined in a process. For instance, a particular effect of the automobile, the reduction in revenue of railroads, has other causes, as the increase in pipe lines, while the increase in pipe lines in addition decreases the consumption of coal. And any particular factor in the increase in suburbs, such as the telephone, has other social effects, as on the marketing habits of housewives.

"An invention has a series of effects following each other somewhat like the links of a chain. Thus the mechanical stoker for engines (a) increased the amount of coal going under a boiler, (b) which permits a more powerful locomotive, (c) which increases the length of trains, (d) which makes the distance a passenger carries his baggage greater, (e) which increases the number of porters, (f) which contributes its bit to the status of the Negro, and so on. Or, the automobile (a) replaces horses, (b) which diminishes the number of stables, (c) which in turn reduces the number of flies, (d) which lessens somewhat the communicable diseases.

Though these derivative effects become attenuated, "they are nevertheless real, particularly when seen as the accumulated result of thousands of different inventions, in a society where social conditions are closely intertwined.

Inventions bring the problem of adjustment, and into this problem enters the time element. There is a costly lag in adaptation. "Thus, child labor in industry was a product of the delay on the part of the family and society in adjusting to the provision of safety devices and compensation plans."

"Society," the report concludes, "will hardly decide to discourage science and invention, for these have added knowledge and have brought material welfare. And as to the difficulties and problems they create, the solution would an advance of money would have to come from some source pending receipt and sale of the commodities supplied in exchange.

The Government is reported to be opposed to a suggestion that it guarantee a credit of $4,000,000 to Russia in order to make the exchange possible. Failing this guarantee by the Canadian Government the necessary financial arrangements would have to be made elsewhere, either through private banking organizations or through a cash advance by Russia.

Safe! Powerful! Goes 3 times as far

Now $1 equals $3 in buying protection against winter colds

PEPSODENT ANTISEPTIC is 3 times as powerful as other leading mouth antiseptics. Hence it goes 3 times as far. And whether you buy the 25c, 50c, or $1 size, you still get 3 times as much for your money.

YOU may be trying to save money. But instead of saving it, you're losing it if you don't know the difference between the two kinds of mouth antiseptics on the market. One kind must be used full strength to be effective—that means "if you add water, it won't kill germs."

Pepsodent CAN be diluted

But the other kind—Pepsodent Antiseptic—is powerful enough to be diluted with 2 parts of water and still kill germs in less than 10 seconds—yet Pepsodent is absolutely safe when used full strength. Pepsodent Antiseptic is at least three times as powerful as other leading mouth antiseptics. Hence it goes three times as far—gives you three times as much for your money—and gives you extra protection against stubborn sore throat, colds, unpleasant breath, and all kinds of germ infections.

Be safe—and save money!

When choosing your mouth antiseptic, be sure you choose the one that, even when it is diluted with water, still kills germs! The other kind costs more... both in money and in health. Insist on Pepsodent Antiseptic—and be safe!

IMPURE BREATH (Halitosis)

The amazing results of Pepsodent Antiseptic in fighting sore throat could prove its effectiveness in checking Bad Breath (Halitosis). Remember, Pepsodent is 3 times more powerful in killing germs than other leading mouth antiseptics. Remember, even when diluted with water it still kills germs.

WOMAN SHOOT ONE OF THREE MEN HOLDING UP HOME

Itinerant, Wounded in Hand, Admits Taking Part in Attempt to Rob Negro Residence.

An 18-year-old itinerant was shot in the hand last night in a holdup in a Negro residence, in which he said he was induced to take part by two men whom he asked for money on the street.

Police first learned of the holdup at 7:50 o'clock, when the youth, who said he was Gordon Baker, applied for treatment by a physician in the Commercial Building. Sixth and Olive streets. Baker first told the officers he had been wounded in a holdup at Sixteenth and Chestnut streets, then told of meeting the two strangers there and asking for money for a cup of coffee.

One gave him a nickel, he said, and both went with him to a restaurant to see he spent the money for coffee. After he had drunk the coffee, Baker said, one man told him of their holdup plans and suggested if he would act as lookout they would "split" the money obtained with him.

The three then went to a house at 407 Cerre street, and the two strangers entered. One later came out and asked him to go inside and keep his hand in his pocket, as if he had a weapon.

Finding two Negro women in the house, one man seized one and dragged her to a back room. The other woman grabbed a revolver and fired one shot, striking Baker in the hand. All the men ran out and Baker said he went directly to the physician's office. At the Cerre street address, police found two Negro women who identified Baker as one of the three in the holdup. The woman, who said she was Martha Dixon, told police she fired the shot.

Baker had in his possession a badge marked "Sheriff." He said a man in Springfield, Mo., had given it to him.

TWO OFFICIALS URGED CAUSAL LAW ENFORCING

Kinsey and Brooks Before Aldermanic Group Oppose Repeal Bills.

Bills for the repeal of widening ordinances for portions of St. Louis, Kansas, Arsenal street and McCausland avenue were discussed before the Aldermen yesterday. The committee took the bills under advisement and will conduct a second hearing next Wednesday afternoon. Harland Bartholomew, engineer for the City Plan Commission, told the Aldermen that the widening of 270 miles of major streets planned in 1929 is more than two-thirds completed. If the Aldermen conclude that the program can not be finished, because of economic conditions and the objection of property owners, who would be assessed for part of the cost, Bartholomew urged that building line restrictions be passed to facilitate future street widenings.

He said he does not favor the recent proposal that only 15 percent of the cost of street widening be assessed against abutting property, explaining that in some known instances, notably Washington boulevard, the widening of a thoroughfare resulted in material increases in the value of abutting property.

President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service, and Director of Streets and Sewers Brooks entered objections to the repeal bills. They especially urged that the McCausland avenue project be carried out, explaining that it would form a needed traffic link between north-west St. Louis and Carondelet.

The cost of widening St. Louis avenue, between Grand and Good-fellow boulevards has been figured by the condemnation Department at $54,735, of which $40,000 would be assessed against 3223 parcels of real estate. The balance would be paid by the city from general revenue or bond issue funds. It is estimated that the assessment against real estate would vary from $5 to $7 a front foot.

The cost of the Arsenal street widening, from Kingshighway to 6900 west, would approximate $30,000, of which $17,000 would be paid by the city. The assessment against abutting property would be about $3 a front foot. A petition signed by property owners opposing the widening was presented at the meeting.

The cost of the McCausland avenue widening, south from Manchester street, has not been estimated.

ANOTHER DIRECTOR RESIGNS FROM MISSOURI STATE LIFE

Stephen Paul of New York Is Third to Withdraw in Protest Against $800,000 Loan

A third director has resigned from Missouri State Life Insurance Co. in protest against its recent loan of $800,000 to finance purchase of control of Kentucky Home Life Insurance Co. of Louisville. He is Stephen Paul, New York broker.

Previous resignations within the last month were those of Melvin L. Emerich, Chicago broker, and Fred E. Lualaba, chairman of the board of Kentucky Home Life. William T. Nardin, president of Missouri State Life, said Paul's resignation was received last week. It did not become public until today. Paul and Emerich are connected with Hallgarten & Co. of New York and Chicago.

Interests of Julius H. Barnes of New York, chairman of the board of Missouri State Life, bought out Kentucky Home Life, which owns 25 percent of the Missouri State Life stock. Missouri State Life guaranteed an $800,000 loan for this group at three St. Louis banks, and on Jan. 5 took over the loan. Missouri State Life, which is probably will fill the three vacancies on the board at the annual meeting next Tuesday, and there may be additional changes. Kentucky Home Life's board of directors, St. Louis concern may be put in a voting trust after the annual meeting of the Louisville company a week later.

HOOVER EXPECTED TO VETO PHILIPPINE MEASURE TODAY

Party Leaders Instruct Members to Prepare to Vote on Question of Over-Riding.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Expectation that President Hoover will veto the Philippines Independence bill without delay increased at the Capitol today, following a conference between the House and Senate members were instructed by party leaders to vote on whether the message is sent to Congress today. It is the plan of Speaker Garner, in the event the message reaches the House today, to call for an immediate vote on whether the message will be over-ruled. It requires a two-thirds vote of both chambers to over-ride a veto. The House vote on passage last spring was 300 to 47.

The resident Philippine Commissioner, Pedro Guevara, said he had been informed by leading Republicans that President Hoover had reached his decision to veto the measure.

Internal Revenue Bureau Clears Up Confusion Concerning Income Tax Returns.

Post-Dispatch Bureau, 201-205 Kellogg Building, WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—A widely circulated report recently broadcast on the radio, that money spent for the support of unemployed relatives may be deducted as contributions to charity in the Federal income tax returns of this year is incorrect.

There has been no change in the law or the regulations on this subject. An exemption on account of the support of an unemployed person can only be claimed if that person falls within the class of persons for whom the taxpayer is entitled to the regular $400 allowance for dependents.

In a memorandum given to the Post-Dispatch yesterday, in reply to inquiries, the Internal Revenue Bureau cited the provisions of the act of 1922 relating to personal exemptions and credits for dependents. This act allows for the purpose of the normal tax, an exemption of $200 to the head of a family.

It further provides that there shall be allowed a credit of $100 for each person (other than a band or wife) dependent upon and receiving his chief support from the taxpayer, if such dependent is under 18 years old, or over 18, incapable of self-support because of mental or physical defects.

These provisions, except that the personal exemption has been reduced from $300 to $200, are substantially the same as under the prior revenue act.

The regulations to be promulgated under the act of 1922 have not yet been issued, but they are under the act of 1922 define the term "head of a family" as an individual who actually supports and maintains one household one or more individuals who are closely connected with him by blood relationship, marriage or adoption, and whose right to exercise family control and provide for those dependent is based upon some moral or legal obligation.

In the absence of continuous actual residence together, whether or not a person with dependent relatives is the head of a family within the meaning of the act must depend on the character of the separation. For example, if a parent is separated from his dependent children by relatives or in a boarding house, while he lives elsewhere, the exemption still applies, but, if without necessity, the dependent continuously makes his home elsewhere, the dependent is not the head of a family, irrespective of the question of support.

Further, according to the bureau's ruling, it must be shown, before any taxpayer can qualify as the head of a family, that the amount spent by the taxpayer for the maintenance of the supported person was more than one-half of the total cost of that individual's support.

For the taxpayer to receive the $400 credit for a dependent it must be shown, in addition to the other requirements, that the taxpayer contributed more than one-half of the cost of the dependent's support.

The memorandum of the bureau continues: "The amount contributed by a taxpayer to a needy relative or individual may not be deducted under the heading of 'contributions,' as there is no provision in the act of 1922 for such deduction. Other contributions for deducting amounts given to individuals. Such contributions are considered gifts and are not deductible."

"It is seen from the foregoing that there is really no new problem raised by reason of financial assistance given in 1922 by individuals to their unemployed relatives. If the conditions presented in any case are such as to bring it within the provisions of the law and regulations, a personal exemption as head of a family may be claimed for one or more dependents who may be claimed by a taxpayer."

BEHIND THE SCREENS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 11. — HE slim little English girl whose name really is Heather Angel has arrived to join the rapidly growing British colony of Hollywood, and from immediate indications she will not be long in finding her own niche in the local films.

Brunet, with brown eyes and a pretty face, Heather has something of the wistful appeal that has made Janet Gaynor popular, and it is not unlikely that her first picture will be "House of Refuge," a vehicle in which she will have opportunity to open the tear-ducts, smile a little, and in other subtle ways work her path into American movie fans' affections.

HE has an English accent, to be sure, but in recent times that has ceased to be a handicap, and there are even fans who, formerly objecting to the style of speech, now enjoy it.

Heather left her pet cocker spaniel, Pat, in England—"I hated to, terribly"—but her mother is with her. It is her first visit to America, although as a stage actress she toured extensively in other countries.

"I was so surprised," she says, "to find Hollywood what it is. I had rather expected to see a little town by the sea. But it is grand, and New York—I had never dreamed it would be so wonderful!"

LIKE most English cinema actresses, Heather divided her time between screen and stage. She also has worked in Berlin for UFA. It was her work in "After Office Hours" that brought her a Fox contract and a trip to America.

She doesn't like pictures in which she has to weep constantly. James Cagney's autographing fingers are getting a rest while his younger brother Bill is in town on a visit. Fans thrust their autograph books under Bill's nose, even when James is alone—evidently believing that Bill looks more like the star than Jim does.

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

My dear Mrs. Carr: I AM coming to you for advice; though, as a matter of fact, it is a very embarrassing problem for me to detail this problem to a stranger, even my own family does not know about the details of this case. I have a daughter who is just past her twentieth birthday, who was married one month before she revealed the fact to us. At that time she was just past 16 years old. We were distressed to death, but thought, since the boy was of a good family, we would leave them alone and they might manage. To our horror, we found the boy had been in trouble and sentenced, but paroled. He will not allow his wife and two children to see us, nor are we allowed to go there. Neither will he support them. We have to provide for the child's education, and the neighborhood must do so. He will not take a job or pay rent. And allows a charity organization to feed them.

For several weeks now he has been out with characters who were in trouble with him before. When my daughter says she will leave, he makes threats against the children's lives. My husband and I are nervous wrecks. What shall we do? I don't know what your daughter can promise herself by staying with this criminal, "good family" or no good family. What you need is a good lawyer, who will know how to handle these threats and to see that the authorities keep a strict watch on this young man. I feel sure if the charity organization you mention could know about the situation, they would be another means of assistance. Your troubles need not, necessarily, be aired; for I think this bully can be managed by the good long arm of the law, and quietly. I do not believe, for a moment, that he will harm his children; he is already in too much trouble and will not be paroled forever.

Dear Martha Carr: I CONSIDER your advice good and I have several questions I want to ask you. I am 16 years old and never go out with boys. What is the matter with me? I am not specially good-looking or specially ugly and am rather popular with the boys and girls at school. I love to go places. What is the matter with me? 2—My mother absolutely refuses to allow me to dance. I hate to go and be a wallflower. Shall I learn to dance? JUST WONDERING.

You sound as if you think you are about ready for the Museum. At your age it isn't extraordinary to be an adept at attracting the boys; as a matter of fact, the adept at that age is rather rare. You are sometimes a bit-wit about other things. Why not use a little diplomacy about the dancing? It is very unnecessary, and, as a matter of fact, too gauche. You should learn the art in this round-about way.

Talk to one of your mother's friends or relatives, who has a dancing daughter. Ask her to bring the subject around to your mother and explain that there is no harm. There are always older folk who will come to your assistance, if you go about it reasonably.

Dear Martha Carr: I LIKE your column very much. Just about the time I begin to feel that you are being harsh with someone, you say the dearest, most understanding things. I am of a melancholy nature. I am like anyone, I like 'em. But when I don't, well—

I detest crowds, hate cards and love noisy children! I love to dance and swim. I enjoy riding hours and hours alone and am simply "goofy" about poetry. Am fond of music, and sacred music makes me very sad. Am unsettled in religious affairs, though religiously inclined. I forget to add that I am extremely sensitive. How do you estimate me?

DOUBTFUL. Too introspective. Perhaps not as sensitive as you might be. Keen sensibilities, not always well directed. And a natural leaning to the artistic. But perhaps unnecessary. Particularly understanding the latter and (though it is not my habit to speak of the "I" in this column) I will tell you, in order to prove that I understand, that I couldn't be taken to Sunday school when I was very little, because the solemnity of sacred music made me burst into tears the moment the organ started. It was because so much of it is written in a minor key—as Chopin put it—"the key that weeps!"

And when one is that nature, one sometimes is brusque in order to choke back foolish sentiment and excess emotion, in order to maintain one's equilibrium. Do not stay alone too much. And try not to see the crudities of people too much.

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for a personal reply.

MARLENE'S Mannish CLOTHES Start TROUBLE

Employers Protest, Director Flees When Dietrich Appears on the Streets in Trousers

MARLENE DIETRICH... When she first came to this country as a film star.

—BY H. H. NIEMEYER—

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 11. — JUST what a pair of pants—or rather 17 pairs of pants—had to do with the determination of Marlene Dietrich to shake the dust of Hollywood from her mannish shoes and give up a salary of $4000, cash not stage money, is not entirely clear. Certainly the German star's wardrobe played a part in the recent upheaval which started the film colony. Without doubt it brought about a split between Dietrich and her "discoverer" and close friend, Josef von Sternberg, who was only Joe's excuse for breaking up the partnership which had carried on, through law suits and other things since he found her over in Europe three years ago and brought her to this country to shine as another exotic Garbo.

And Dietrich is exotic although she has not yet moved into La Garbo's place in the cinema sun. Also she is slightly temperamental. Von Sternberg is very much that way, too. A lot of people out here think he is a bit peculiar. He got the idea not so long ago that he was about to be put on the spot by gangsters and never went anywhere in his Rolle-Royce without a private detective at his side. Had the front and back doors of his Hollywood apartment lined with two inches of solid steel and engaged, as a constant companion for a while, an expensive psychoanalyst to discover what there was to make him the prey of gunmen.

JOSEF VON STERNBERG... Complete with beard and a Mandarin moustache.

After that something happened. Von Sternberg announced that Marlene should have another director. Said it was better for her and better for him. They were both getting in a rut of one type of films and another man would be able to lift Dietrich out of the "typed" class and, at the same time, allow him to show more versatility. Dietrich was quite plainly disturbed. Von Sternberg was a hard master. Joe knew how an actress should act and he stormed around the lot when he was working on a Dietrich film. Stormed at her, too, and she liked it. Honestly believes that she could not do good work under any other director.

DOMESTIC SCENE... (Top) Marlene, her husband and daughter.

And then came the episode of the pants.

Now Hollywood is not much on conventions. It just happens that the present writ has never been accused of being an Adonis. Getting out of a rumble seat of an automobile, when we do it, always causes a commotion back home but out here we might do that stunt, a hundred times a day on Hollywood boulevard clad in pajamas and attract no attention at all.

GIRLS flit back and forth along Hollywood's Gay White Way in beach outfits which would cause comment even out on the Meramec so that, when, a few months ago, Marlene Dietrich suddenly blossomed out in mannish trousers no one thought very much about it except Von Sternberg. He put his foot down on the performance and Miss Dietrich responded by going to Hollywood's most exclusive and expensive men's tailor and ordering 17 suits of clothes. Even had a full dress tail coat made and wore it to evening parties.

And Von Sternberg quit cold. Packed up and rushed off to Germany saying he was going for his health but there is a pretty strong belief out here that he is going to make pictures over there where he thinks his artistic temperament will not be hampered by money-bound studio executives.

Marlene's $4000 a week contract

AND THE BATTLE BEGAN... Film magnates groaned, Von Sternberg raved when Marlene appeared on the streets in trousers.

with Paramount expires next draw less than a tenth of that month. The studio prepared to amount. But Dietrich has been thrifty over here. Her greatest expense has been the care of her little daughter. For almost a year picked "The Song of Songs" as a vehicle for her, spent, so they say, $300,000, in getting it ready and then Miss Dietrich refused to go on. Just the other day she declared that the piece did not suit her talents and announced that, contract or no contract, she was going back home with her little daughter and her husband who had come to this country again at Christmas time.

Paramount rushed in with a timely damage suit and a request for a restraining order to prevent the star from leaving the country. Had a pretty good case, too, and Miss Dietrich got some legal advice. As a result, she announced that she would stay and make the picture, and now she is at work again. It is generally believed that when her contract expires in February she will not renew it. It is true that $4000 a week is a lot of money. Presidents of film companies in Germany don't draw down as much, and pretty good cinema stars everything.

As said before, Marlene is thrifty, however. She has a bank roll now which would permit her to live in Germany like a princess—and then Von Sternberg is in Germany and might be persuaded to direct her in pictures over there.

There are less poetic rumors, too. One is that another studio is waiting for the Dietrich contract to expire and then will induce Marlene and Joe to move over to that lot and combine again.

But through it all Marlene wears the pants. Not a pajama outfit or anything of that sort, but regular men's clothes with suspenders and much, and pretty good cinema stars everything.

Cross Roads Quilt Pattern

HERE, indeed, is a delightful road to travel, and although at first glance it might seem rather difficult, you will find it is in appearance only, for it is really an exceptionally easy quilt to make. Then, too, it gives up those many, many small varied colored pieces you may have in your workbasket, and a chance to make up any color scheme that your fancy dictates. You will find it difficult to leave this piece of handwork for each new crossroad leads you on and on.

Quilting design No. Q-500, is Cross Roads Quilt. Stamped pattern for tracing, 10c each; perforated pattern, 35c.

A 32-page book, showing in colors a variety of designs for quilts, patchwork, embroidery, etc., is available to readers. The above pattern, or any other published in the Post-Dispatch, will be sent free with the booklet, which is 25 cents. Single patterns are 10 cents each, three for 25 cents. When They Should Eat Less

When the man of the family is supposed to cut down on the amount of meat he eats, it is a difficult thing for the housewife to solve, as he will invariably need a little help if he is fond of it. The best way is to cut down on the quantity of meat bought, so that in serving equally, his portion will be lessened. In all probabilities it will not hurt the rest of the family to eat a bit less as well.

The Kitchen Trash Basket

Don't buy a straw or wooden trash basket for kitchen usage. Buy one made of metal so that it can be washed and kept sanitary. Meat papers, cartons and other containers of food are so apt to spill some of the remains of their contents into the basket and unless the basket can be washed, roaches and mice are bound to be attracted.

Mrs. Post on Formal Clothes

GOOD TASTE

By EMILY POST

Neither Day Nor Evening Clothes

LATELY many letters have asked the same question that this one does:

Dear Mrs. Post: I'd like to ask you about my so-called dinner dress, which is in every way a simple daytime model except for the cutaway V back. To wear with it, I got a velvet toque and a plain velvet coat. Now I am wondering whether to wear the hat and match the front, or to wear no hat and match the back. And which is best when I am dining with a man who is not in dinner clothes?

When I bought these clothes the shop insisted they were in perfect taste to mix with day and evening clothes. Is this true?

My answer: I agree that the type of dress you describe is very hard to classify—and this obviously the intention of its design. The conventional rule is, of course, that a woman should not wear evening dress unless the man with her is wearing dinner clothes. An improper illustration often by sent away in magazines is the picture of a woman in evening dress sitting at table with men in business suits. From the point of view of good taste this is impossible, unless by "cut away V" you mean that the back is meant to be adapted to the increasing tendency (sometimes practicability) among business men of not going home to dress before taking a cut-away dinner. From your description it seems to me that your dress and toque and coat are quite perfect for dining with a man who wears a dark sack suit, unless by "cut away V" you mean that the back is very much cut out. In this case, I should, if I were you, wear a flat lining of flesh-colored georgette, which would suggest a cut-away back at the same time be a daytime dress. If the V is very narrow and not more than halfway down to the waist, it should be all right as it is. If the man you are with is wearing a dinner coat, wear your dress as it is. If it is very low, go with or without a toque, as you choose. If the man is in rough tweed clothes, then you ought to wear strictly day clothes and a hat with brim or without, as you like.

Judith Goes to Work in Office
Of Her New Friend, Dr. Mitchell

By ROB EDEN

CHAPTER NINE

JUDITH stepped into the even routine of Doctor Mitchell's office so easily, so naturally, that after she had been there a week it seemed she had been meeting his patients, answering his calls for a year. The bank was far away in the past, the hurry of it, the frantic haste at the end of the month. The thought of Toby was close, but the bank had faded.

She liked the work. Liked to come into the door marked "Entrance" which led into the domain that was hers. The well-furnished, homey reception room, with its deep, comfortable chairs, its low end tables, its thick oriental rugs that hushed the sound of her feet.

Her own desk at the long window had nothing professional about it, nothing officious. It was of satinwood with spindle legs, and a smooth, inlaid top. In the drawers were the neat catalog cards, with more of them, the later ones, in a standing cabinet near the desk.

Flowers on the desk, usually low bowls of them, every day. Flowers, too, in Dr. Mitchell's office adjoining the reception room. Judith seldom went into it, but it was large, too, and in one corner was the great, roll-top, walnut desk, old-fashioned, incongruous among the newer furniture, that had belonged to Craig Mitchell's father. For the practice had been started years ago by Craig's father.

Off the consulting office were three other rooms, the examination room, the dressing room, which was occupied by the nurse, Doris Benjamin. When a patient wasn't using it. There was another office, too, the domain of Mitchell's assistant, Dr. Humbolt.

MITCHELL seldom came to the office before noon. In the early morning hours he was operating, later he was out on calls. It was only in the afternoon that he was available for consultation. A stream of patients came from two o'clock on. When Judith saw his appointment sheet the first day, she was amazed. She had never conceived of a man being so busy.

"Does he always work this hard?" she asked Miss Benjamin. "Always. He works too hard," Miss Benjamin said.

When Doris spoke of Dr. Mitchell, her whole attitude changed. Her face softened, her lips grew quite grave, a new light burned in her gray eyes, and she lost that look of staid efficiency which her tall, slender figure acquired from the white uniform she always wore.

She wasn't pretty, but her features were good, and her hair fell in soft waves about her face. Six years ago she had come to Craig Mitchell's office fresh from the Crossland hospital where she had taken her training, and from the moment she started to work for him, she knew instinctively how he wanted things done.

It was Doris who arranged the flowers in his office in the morning; Doris who gave a last look at his desk to see that everything was all right; Doris who insisted that he take a glass of warm milk as a pick-me-up in the afternoon when he had had a hard day. Doris fixed the milk herself and carried it into his room determinedly.

To the reception room Judith could see what she liked, but in Dr. Mitchell's office, about which she was full of awe, Judith felt at a loss. Doris stayed invariably in the suite until Mitchell himself left.

"Doris takes good care of me," Mitchell said one day as he was passing into his office. "Better." "Forgetting?"

She nodded. She was forgetting. The hurt wasn't so bad as it had been, although it wasn't healed by any manner of means. It was still there, throbbing at the first thrust of Toby's name, at any vagrant thought of him.

"That's good," knew you were strong enough to overcome it," Mitchell opened the door of his office. It was the first time he had said anything about their talk since she had been in the office. And she had told him the truth. She was forgetting. The break from the bank had been a good one.

Sometimes she closed her eyes and shivered when she thought of herself still there, seeing Toby every day in his cage, hearing Donna's voice in her ear over the phone with some message for her husband. Purposely she had kept away from the bank. It wasn't because the Medical building was 10 blocks away, and she ate her lunches in the cafeteria in the building. After lunch, because she didn't want to run into anyone from the bank on the streets, she went up to the roof garden.

Unusual Interiors of Attractive St. Louis Homes

Rare Antiques in Residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Culver Jr. in Hampton Park

Empire dining room in the E. R. Culver Jr. home showing interesting wall treatment, especially over windows.

By JOSEPHINE WALTER.

THE beauty of rare antiques and placed at the long French doors, the red tone being used on other pieces of furniture. Here, too, simplicity provides an interior at once cosmopolitan and homelike in the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Culver Jr. in Hampton Park. In fact, the atmosphere of this house is so attractively informal that it is only on closer inspection that one realizes that it must have taken many years of foreign travel to collect such an array of treasures.

At the right as one enters is a tiny music room which immediately sounds the note of cheery hospitality so characteristic of this home. Carpeted in a soft green-blue, as are the other rooms on this floor, and with plain buff walls; lovely French and Italian chairs of the eighteenth century are placed invitingly about the room. A love-seat upholstered in an unusual rose-red tone of mude cloth rests on the ground shade of the colorful chintz drapes. The drapes are placed on deeply recessed windows filled with plants and set off by dainty velvet curtains. A set of rare, black-lacquered Japanese panels placed on one wall provides a focal point of interest in this charming little room.

In the living room just beyond one again realizes how deftly the restrained feeling of the room itself provides a foil for the many beautiful objects placed in it. Plain, years ago he was at work with a girl, but nothing came of it. I used to tease him about her—but I'm sure he wasn't in love with her, and the affair didn't last long.

Pleasant in the office with bowl of roses wafting their fragrance through the cool, high-ceilinged room. Even the sick face of the patients didn't bother Judith as they had at first. They were so quiet in their pain, and they read busily until they were admitted to Dr. Mitchell.

TWO weeks droned away. Three weeks. "How's the heart action?" Mitchell said one day as he was passing into his office. "Better." "Forgetting?"

She nodded. She was forgetting. The hurt wasn't so bad as it had been, although it wasn't healed by any manner of means. It was still there, throbbing at the first thrust of Toby's name, at any vagrant thought of him.

"That's good," knew you were strong enough to overcome it," Mitchell opened the door of his office. It was the first time he had said anything about their talk since she had been in the office. And she had told him the truth. She was forgetting. The break from the bank had been a good one.

Sometimes she closed her eyes and shivered when she thought of herself still there, seeing Toby every day in his cage, hearing Donna's voice in her ear over the phone with some message for her husband. Purposely she had kept away from the bank. It wasn't because the Medical building was 10 blocks away, and she ate her lunches in the cafeteria in the building. After lunch, because she didn't want to run into anyone from the bank on the streets, she went up to the roof garden.

A month since she had even seen Toby. She was proud of herself. Some day, not too soon of course, she'd have the courage to look through the little box in her dresser drawer, the box that was filled with letters of love between her and Toby. She wasn't trusting herself to do that, though, for a long time.

That night all the good work was undone. As she was leaving the office for home, she saw him coming toward her in the corridor.

WOMEN today are choosing the more delicate and dainty scents in perfumes. Sometimes perfumes are used to produce the faint sweetness, but more often the sachet powder serves. These powders are dusted into squares of cotton which are sewed into small silk slip containers and tucked into bureau drawers where garments are kept.

Opening from the living room is the orangery or garden room, a room of comfort and ease. Here tremendous windows are hung with Venetian blinds and two shades of theatrical gauze. The underneath curtains are in an orange-yellow tone while the over-curtains of soft blue are edged with black chintz leaf prints. This same pointed motif is used for the wooden valances placed over the windows. The wooden and glass doors leading out onto the garden porch are painted with flowers in flower pots so that the garden is almost literally brought in-doors for the winter season. Simple black racks placed at either side of the room hold more of the ornaments for which this house is notable.

THE dining room with its antique Empire furniture is one of the most interesting in the entire house. Here the exquisite tones of walls and drapes set off to perfection the unusual old pieces used. A table paper of Empire design, a sign in an old yellow-brown shade has been placed above a dado of plain brocade. The yellow and black carried over into the drapes which are of chartreuse satin with a hint of gold in them. Black and gold upholstery has been used on the dining chairs which are of very unusual design, having a metal inlaid set in the center of the black splat. A handsome sideboard is decorated with Wedgewood insets and topped with marble, with many interesting bits of silver placed on top.

What's Going On Or About to Go On in the St. Louis Movie Theaters

RONALD COLMAN heads the new Loew's State Theater program beginning tomorrow in "Cynara," a United Artists production taken from the refrain of Ernest Dowson's most famous poem, "I have been faithful to thee, Cynara in my fashion."

"Cynara" is a quiet, human story that might have come out of yesterday's newspaper headlines. Its story is an everyday story. One that happens to nearly everyone. It is a story of a young man, a romantic drama that Colman and the supporting players work against a background of luxury, well-being and nice living.

Important in naming the large cast of players supporting Colman in the new feature is the debut of Phyllis Barry, a newcomer to the silver screen, who shares the feminine honors with the beautifully groomed Kay Francis. Miss Barry was discovered in the Pasadena Community Playhouse by Samuel Goldwyn.

MARY EATON, one of the late Ziegfeld's stars, heads the cast of "Sally," which is the stage attraction at the Fox Theater. T. Roy Barnes, comedian, appears as "Otis Hooper," the sly promoter who introduces "Sally" to the social register. Jack Waldron and Miss Harriet, well known in the vaudeville field, have important roles.

On the screen, the new comedy team, Zasu Pitts and Slim Summerville, appear in "They Just Had to Get Married." Their supporting cast is an excellent one, including as it does such accomplished players as Roland Young, Phil Dorsey, C. Aubrey Smith and Verree Teasdale.

BARBARA STANWYCK plays the stellar role in the next attraction at the R-KO Missouri Theater, starting Saturday. The picture, "The Bitter Tea of General Yen," is adapted from the popular novel of the same name by Grace Zaring Stone. Miss Stanwyck portrays a lovely American girl who goes to China to become the bride of a young doctor, doing missionary work in that country. Through a trick of fate, Miss Stanwyck is thrown into the hands of Gen. Yen, a handsome lord. Nils Asther, who plays this role, portrays a new type of shiek lover, and is said to be the screen's latest romantic personality. Supporting Miss Stanwyck and Asther are Walter Connolly, Gavin Gordon and the exotic Toshia Mori.

LACK-EYED Sylvia Sydney, eyebrows slanted and hair lacquered, plays the title role in "Madame Butterfly," modernized screen version of one of the old romances, which comes to the Ambassador. Cary Grant, Charlie Ruggles, Irving Pichel and Helen Jensen Eddy play the principal supporting roles.

The story centers around Miss Sydney, cast as a high-born Japanese girl, and Grant, Lieutenant in the U. S. Navy, stationed in Japan, who fall in love. Ultimately, he is sent back to the United States. He leaves, promising to return "when the robins nest again." He does return, years later, but under entirely different circumstances—circumstances which bring the picture to a dramatic climax.

RAY WAS SURPRISED

An unusual accident occurred Friday afternoon, a few miles east of Fort Scott, which cost Ray Horning the price of a newly purchased shorthorn bull. Horning had bought the animal at Fort Scott, and started home with it in a truck. After having traveled a few miles, the driver looked back to see how his passenger was behaving. He was surprised to discover the bull had disappeared. Investigation disclosed the fact that the end gate had come loose and the bull had backed out.

Roosevelt Reported Friendly to Measure, But a Veto Is Expected If It Is Forwarded to President Hoover in Time.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13. — The re-fixing plan voted by the House yesterday in hope of adding to the 1933 national farm bill some today faces an uncertain fate in the Senate, while a veto is expected to await the bill if it is President Hoover's opinion for the most part are giving opinions pending a closer look of the intricate allotment provisions. But in some quarters there is strong opposition. A vote of 203 to 151, the measure was passed by the House, the record friendliness of President Roosevelt being a big factor in its passage. The Senate Agriculture Committee—Smith of South Carolina—has indicated his opposition.

Chairman's Attitude.
The bill was introduced by the Senate yesterday and referred to the Agriculture Committee.

Chairman McNary today called Senate Agriculture Committee to meet in executive session today to take up the bill, which rides a bounty to producers of commodities. He said the committee then would decide a vote of action on the bill, including such questions as whether hearings would be necessary that changes might be considered.

Spokane would guess McNary said to "paper men" that with some modification of language and deletion of fair exchange values the probable inclusion of all commodities, commodities, the decision of the Department of Agriculture with respect to commodities the bill shall rate on, the bill would be rejected out favorably by the committee.

Spokane is going to support it if it simply it, make it practicable bring it within the Constitution because in theory the quick economic recovery the council could make would be through easing the purchasing power of "culture."

Party Lines Broken.
House party lines were split on measure which was drafted by representative Jones of Texas. Bill, assailed by its opponents "unworkable and unconstitutional" received 139 Democratic and one Farmer votes, to 101 Republican and Democratic nays.

Days of debate preceded the vote. Members were impatient voted again and again to shut debate.

motion to return the bill to the culture Committee, made by McGugin (Rep.), Kansas, tried substitute the export debenture bill, but the chair ruled it not name.

This bill has been so encumbered by bringing in other commodities, Beam said, "that any able effectiveness is lost. By fixing hogs in you are making the worst mistake of your life and by fixing dairy products in you are making it."

Johnson (Dem.), Missouri, sought postpone action, saying he had Democrats whispering "it never see the light of day in Senate." He also was ruled out order by the chair.

from both Democratic and Republican ranks, the tariff provisions of the bill were assailed. The Arkansas told his colleagues that "because I understood bill had the support of my silent-elect, I tried to be loyal support it."

after three more commodities were added, he said, "and when try to force down me the high-tariff ever proposed, I stop."

However, he voted for the bill. 5-cent a pound tariff on just voted out, 114 to 84, on a motion by Snow (Rep.), Maine. But bill as passed carried import tax of 5 cents a pound on short-
